President Leaves for Vacation

With the sound of a roll call vote in the House which overrode his veto of the independent office supply bill still ringing in his ears, President Roosevelt left yesterday for a vacation off the Florida coast. Postmaster General Farley talks with him as the train prepares to leave Washington.

Senate Vote Delayed to Today With Outcome in Doubt.

Roosevelt Silent, Starts Vacation

Increase in Benefits to Veterans Made Chief Issue in Revolt.

Breaking definitely with President Roosevelt on the Government pay restoration and veterans' issues, the House yesterday revolted against Democratic leadership and overrode a veto of the independent offices bill by the overwhelming vote of 310 to 72.

Today the Senate will vote on the same issue with the result in doubt despite a previous inclination to grant more liberal allowances both to Government employes and to veterans than were contained in the compromise House amendments.

The President was sitting at the bedside of his son, John, in Naval Hospital when the news reached him that the House had defied his wishes. He declined to comment on the action and a short while later he entrained for Florida and a brief vacation in tropical waters. It was his first veto of a major bill and the first open revolt.

Leaders Powerless.

Action of the House came swiftly and unexpectedly and left Democratic leaders powerless to stem the rush to the ranks of the veterans' bloc.

Cheers and applause, chiefly from the Republican side, greeted the votes of "aye" to override the veto by such customarily dependable Democrats as Representative Tom Blanton, of Texas.

House leaders had planned to postpone the vote until today in order to line up their forces better until the President insisted on a vote immediately after the receipt of his veto message. Even then Majority Leader Byrns made a half-hearted attempt to delay action, only to be shouted down by cries of "Vote! Vote!"

After the debacle he told newspapermen he was convinced that at least 50 or 60 more nays could have been lined up had action been postponed until today. Speaker Rainey agreed.

Senate Vote Delayed.

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, who has piloted the bill from its inception in the House, stated, however that he believed the outcome would have been

U. S. Returns Mail to Air Lines Today With Bid Call

Rules Will Be Revealed by Postal Officials This Morning.

Barred Concerns May Be Eligible

White House Conference Evolves Temporary Contract Plan.

By Frank Getty.

Flying of the air mail is to be returned to commercial carriers through advertised bidding today.

This decision was reached yesterday afternoon at a White House conference, attended by Attorney General Cummings and Postoffice Department officials, shortly before the President departed on a Florida fishing trip.

Conditions under which the bids will be advertised will not be known until they are announced by the Postoffice Department today, at 10:30 a. m., but it was understood that, through reorganization, companies heretofore barred would be eligible.

Whatever contracts are let through bids advertised today will be strictly temporary in character, pending the adoption of permanent air-mail legislation. Successful carriers, moreover, will receive only 30 to 40 cents per flying mile, compared with considerably higher rates in effect when the Administration canceled commercial contracts more than a month ago.

Temporary Bill Signed.

Yesterday's conference at the White House, on the eve of President Roosevelt's vacation, was attended by Cummings, Postmaster General Farley, and the latter's assistants, W. W. Howes, Harllee Branch, S. A. Cisler, general superintendent of railway and air mail, and Secretary of Commerce Roper.

After the conference, the President signed a temporary air-mail bill. Detailed plans for bidding and the routes to be opened were not revealed.

While it was not made clear whether companies barred heretofore would be eligible to carry the mail, it was indicated that with reorganization satisfactory to the Administration—involving little more than purging the carrier companies of certain officials—such would be the case.

Ban May Be Lifted.

Following the White House conference yesterday afternoon, Postmaster General Farley said that further "checking up" on the situation was necessary, and that nothing pertaining to the temporary air-

Alleged Hanna Plotter Slain

Fleeing Prisoner Meets Death in Georgia Jail Yard.

Thomasville, Ga., March 27 (AP).—Hansell Wilson, Negro suspect in the plot to extort $10,000 from Howard M. Hanna, Cleveland financier, was shot to death in the jail yard here tonight while attempting to escape.

The negro had just been questioned by officers and was being taken to a cell on the second floor of the jail, when he grappled with the jailer and ran. The jailer shot at him five times, but apparently without effect. The Negro ran out into the jail yard, when the jailer fired again and killed him.

During the questioning the Negro at one time told officers that he had been put up to the extortion plan by white men, but later he retracted this. He never named the men.

At another time, he said that he was the one who got the dummy package, placed as a decoy last night. Later, he retracted this also and said that he knew nothing of the plot against Hanna.

Hoover Meets G. O. P. Chief in New Mexico

Santa Fe, N. Mex., March 27 (AP).—Former President Herbert Hoover spent two hours in Santa Fe today on his way to Kansas City and conferred with Ed Safford, State chairman of the Republican central committee.

Mr. Hoover said the meeting had no political significance and that he was on a pleasure trip.

Horner Vetoes Illinois Beer Sale Over Bars

Springfield, Ill., March 27 (AP).—Gov. Henry Horner today vetoed the bill to permit sale of beer over bars in Illinois.

He said the statutes prohibiting sale of alcoholic beverages over bars was enacted "in fulfillment of the promises of both major political parties and in keeping with the wishes of the people, who do not want the old saloon brought back."

Byrd to Keep 6-Month Vigil Alone in Hut

Explorer Will Hibernate, Buried Under Ice, for Sake of Science.

Little America, Antarctica, March 27 (Via Mackay radio to the United Press).—Alone in the wind-swept fastnesses of the South Polar regions, Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd prepared today to spend the next six or seven months in a tiny hut 123 miles south of Little America.

The admiral flew to his advance winter base last Thursday to supervise construction of his one-room shack under the snow and ice, where he will spend months studying delicate weather and climate instruments.

His only contact with his companions at Little America will be by a small radio set, but Byrd intimated he doubted that would function or that he could operate it very well and told his friends not to worry if they failed to hear from him.

"I hope no one will make anything of what I am going to do," Byrd said at the winter base. "I am doing it because I am anxious

Steel Workers In Five States Get 10% Raise

Thousands Receive Wage Boost April 1, With 40-Hour Week.

Pittsburgh, March 27 (AP).—Ernest T. Weir, chairman of the National Steel Corporation, tonight announced his concern joins in the general 10 per cent wage increase to become effective in the steel industry, April 1.

Approximately 18,000 of National Steel's employes are affected.

Weir expressed the belief that the increase would give impetus to other recovery measures.

"As far as our company is concerned, increased economies in production and much improved operating schedules make this wage increase possible at this time," he said.

"This adjustment applies to all wage employes of the National Steel Corporation's steel-producing subsidiaries from foreman to unskilled laborer, and affects about 18,000 employes of the Weirton Steel Co., of Weirton and Clarksburg, W. Va., and Steubenville, Ohio, employes of the Great Lakes Steel Corporation at Detroit, and also Hanna Furnace Corporation, pig iron producers at Buffalo, N. Y., and Detroit, Mich.

Weir emphasized his belief that the industry would continue to operate on the 40-hour week.

Portsmouth, Ohio, March 27 (AP).—Officials of the Wheeling Steel Corporation plant here announced today that effective April 1, the wages of all hourly and tonnage employes would be increased 10 per cent.

Two Killed In Missouri Vote Rioting

Kansas City's "Reform" Election Marked by Sluggings.

Pendergast Machine in Lead, Indication in Early Poll.

Kansas City, March 27 (AP).—Tom Pendergast's Democratic organization tonight moved like a steam roller through the first 40 of the 460 precincts reporting in today's election. The precincts gave 21,975 votes to Pendergast's candidates, and 1,948 for the Fusionists.

Kansas City, March 27 (AP).—Two election workers were slain and more than a score of others injured in outbreaks of gunplay, kidnapings, sluggings and fist-fights, as the Democratic and Citizens-Fusionist forces battled at the polls here today for control of the city government.

Feeling aroused in the campaign between the "Little Tammany" Democrats seeking reelection and the nonpartisan Fusionists who sought to overthrow what they termed the "boss rule" of T. J. Pendergast, Democratic leader, brought voters swarming to the ballot boxes. A record vote was forecast.

Willie Findley, a colored Democratic precinct captain, was shot and killed at a polling place.

Another man was killed in a gun battle in a southeastern precinct. Two others were wounded so seriously they probably will die.

Reporter Beaten.

Dr. Arthur Wells, Citizens Fusionist candidate for councilman; Justin D. Bowersock, a reporter for the Kansas City Star, and Lloyd Cole, Fusionist worker, were assaulted by hoodlums while investigating reports the Democrats were "running repeaters" from one precinct to another.

Bowersock was slugged and shots were reported fired at him. Two men pursued him in a car to a door of the Star Building, one waving a pistol. The Star offered a $5,000 reward for his assailants.

Dr. Wells and Cole also were beaten on the head with pistols.

Slain in Poll Fight.

Gov. Park said he had been informed by the Kansas City election commissioners "that the situation has been serious but everything possible is being done to preserve law and order."

Findley was slain in a pistol fight with four or five white gunmen who invaded the polling place where he was stationed. The Republican election judge fled, and the men seized Douglas Gregg, colored, the Democratic judge, and began beating him.

Findley went to the rescue, drawing a pistol. He fired two shots before he died and witnesses said wounded one of his assailants.

Editor's Chauffeur Attacked.

A man with a bullet wound in the abdomen was taken to the General Hospital, where officials recorded his name as Charles Casciola, 25. He refused to say how he had been shot.

James Washington, colored, chauffeur for H. J. Haskell, editor of the Kansas City Star, was kidnaped while driving a Fusion worker to the polls, severely beaten and shot at four times before he escaped.

Mayor Bryce B. Smith headed the Democratic ticket, while Dr. A. Ross Hill, former president of the University of Missouri, was the mayoral candidate of the Citizens-Fusionist ticket.

New York Gold Imports.

New York, March 27 (AP).—Today's statement of the New York Federal Reserve Bank showed gold imports of $3,508,800 from England, Holland and India. There were no exports and no change in the gold stocks held under earmark for foreign account.

Wirt Probe Agreed Upon By Leaders

House Group Expected to Sift Radicalism Claims at Once.

12 New Deal Officials Named by Fish as Communistic.

By Robert C. Albright.

Charges by Dr. William A. Wirt of a "brain trust" plot to revolutionize the Government last night were slated for early hearing, as House leaders withdrew obstacles to a serious Congressional inquiry.

The Rules Committee was summoned to meet this morning to decide what will be done with the Bulwinkle resolution to set up a select committee to conduct the hearing.

House Democratic Leader Joseph W. Byrns predicted favorable committee action and House passage of the resolution, but insisted it be limited rigidly to the Wirt allegations.

At the same time, Republican Leader Bertrand H. Snell said he would oppose any "limited inquiry."

"If they are going into these charges, they should go into them thoroughly, or not at all," he said.

"Some Kind" of Inquiry.

All concerned appeared agreed on an inquiry of some kind—from those who hooted at the Wirt charges as "fantastic," to others who made allegations of their own of a "radical" element wielding wide Administration influence.

The day's developments were:

Representative Hamilton Fish, jr. (Republican), New York, named a dozen Administration officials he said are associated with the Civil Liberties Union, and quoted from a report to the House in 1931, stating the union is "closely affiliated with the Communist movement."

Chairman Samuel Dickstein, of the House Immigration Committee, served notice he will call Dr. Wirt before his special Nazi propaganda investigating committee, when Congress appropriates necessary funds to finance the propaganda inquiry already authorized.

On the floor of the House, Representative George Foulkes (Democrat), Michigan, asked that "the pitiless light of publicity" be thrown upon Dr. Wirt, whom, he said, "has come dangerously near exposing the fantastic notions of somebody's 'hangover' after a long and protracted cocktail party." He charged a Nazi plot to discredit the Administration.

On the Senate floor, Thomas D. Schall (Republican), Minnesota, said "the President is fishing while the Republic burns;" but Senator Hiram W. Johnson (Republican, California, compared the Wirt letter with the stories of "Alice in Wonderland" and "The Baron Munchausen."

Chairman Robert Crosser, of the House Democratic Steering Committee, said that group, which gives a sense of direction to most House legislation, will take no hand in the controversy. He said he had no personal objections to a limited investigation.

Tugwell Heads List.

Leading the list of 12 Administration officials Representative Fish charged with "radical" leanings and affiliation with the Civil Liberties Union, was Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture.

Others on the Fish list were Prof. Paul H. Douglas, of NRA; Prof. Albert E. Taussig, of NRA; Jerome N. Frank, general counsel, AAA;

Nila 'n Her Ruby On a Rock Visit A Ghost (Writer)

New York, March 27 (AP).—Nila Cram Cook, her 6,000,000 gods and her new husband, Albert N. (Starlight on The Waters) Hutchins descended today upon the habitat of Leslie Fulenwider, eminent "ghost," and rumor had it tha' she was to become the runningmate of Frances Heenan (Peaches) Browning.

The Mahatma Ghandi's former disciple and her husband, former mess boy on the steamer which Saturday brought her from India, successfully kept out of the public's eye.

Fulenwider, manager of Famous Features, Inc., who is credited with writing "Peaches'" first person story when she was making front pages, was hardly more communicative, but, however, admitted he was meeting the newlyweds late today.

Mrs. Hutchins and her husband, whom she terms variously as "Starlight on The Water" or "Ruby in The Rock," are understood to be making plans to return to Davenport and the banks of the Mississippi.

Cotton Limit Bill Passage Slated Today

Bankhead Plan Widely Changed as Senate Grows Hostile.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

With more militant hostility being evidenced than in previous days, the Senate yesterday adopted several amendments which, to a large extent, modified the provisions of the Bankhead cotton control bill.

But the heart of the measure, which seeks by coercion to limit this year's cotton crop to 10,000,000 bales, was left untouched. The Senate was ready for a final vote on the measure yesterday when its considertaion came into conflict with the movement to override the President's veto of the independent offices appropriation bill.

A filibuster started by advocates of veterans' legislation to force consideration of the veto message before adjourning plus the refusal of the Democratic leaders to listen to such a proposal prevented the final vote.

When the Senate disposes of the veto message today it will again take up the cotton bill and in all probability pass it, but not by as large a majority as some of the leaders predicted a few days ago.

Many Senators are apprehensive over the precedent set in this bill and will vote against it. Others, as was indicated yesterday, will vote for it with misgivings.

For instance, Senators Reynolds (Democrat), North Carolina, and Long (Democrat), Louisiana, told the Senate they would support the bill only because there was a demand for it from cotton planters.

Ernst's Condition Pronounced Grave

Former Kentucky Senator Stricken on Ship.

Baltimore, March 27 (Spl.).—The condition of former Senator Richard P. Ernst, of Kentucky, under treatment at Johns Hopkins Hospital for a stroke of paralysis suffered aboard ship, was pronounced critical today.

When he was first taken to the hospital, it was believed Mr. Ernst would recover quickly. Further examination, however, showed his condition was serious.

He was stricken aboard the steamship California, en route to New York from Los Angeles, near Colon, Panama.

Dartmouth Students Better Since Repeal

San Pedro, Calif., March 27 (AP).—Dr. Craven Laycock, 65-year-old dean of Dartmouth College, arriving here today on the liner Talamanca, announced that since repeal and with the sale of beer and ale on the Dartmouth campus, social conditions are much better than during the arid years.

"Dartmouth men are learning to carry out the tradition that they may do whatever they like with liquor," he asserted, "so long as they carry it like gentlemen, do not disturb the peace nor offend others."

President Off For Brief Rest Aboard Yacht

By Leon Dure, Jr.

En route with President Roosevelt to Jacksonville, Fla., March 27.—President Roosevelt was southward bound tonight for a much-needed rest at sea after a last round-up sent the White House into an all-day bustle that rivaled the earlier, more hectic, days of the Administration.

Boarding the Presidential special at Union Station late in the afternoon, he began a 10-day vacation off the coast of Florida by relaxing from the terrific strain of a week that included settlement of the automobile labor dispute and a host of other problems.

The cheery disposition, happy outlook normal to the President, was manifest at a morning press conference, but close observers felt he needed one of the periodic outings he particularly enjoys to maintain the pace he had set all winter, confined to the White House.

Seldom has any President approached the clip he attained yesterday, when in the space of a few hours he signed the Navy bill, vetoed two others—including the pay restoration measure—and conferred on the railroad controversy, return of the air mail to private lines, and pending legislation.

Statements and messages to Congress flowed from the office of Stephen T. Early, Presidential secretary, with bewildering monotony as calls cluttered the lobby of the Executive offices. Behind the scene moved the President, clearing his

Full-Pact Navy Bill Is Signed By Roosevelt

Terms Act a Gesture and Voices Hopes Arms Limits Continue.

Expressing the "personal hope" the 1935 Naval conference will "extend all existing limitations and agree to further reductions," President Roosevelt yesterday signed the Vinson bill authorizing the construction of Naval armaments up to treaty limits.

He made it the occasion for a statement in explanation of the law, which he pointed out does not provide for the construction "of a single additional United States warship." It merely "authorizes" the huge Naval program, and does not appropriate any funds to that end.

"It has been and will be the policy of the Administration," declared Mr. Roosevelt, "to favor continued limitation of Naval armaments." Whether the Vinson bill is carried out ultimately "depends on the action of future Congresses."

Calls Act a Gesture.

Thus, in effect, the President termed the act of Congress a gesture, generally understood to have been made in response to rumbling war clouds in the Far East. His statement, which also served to assure big Navy opponents he is not committed to actual building of the ships, termed it nothing more than "a statement of the policy of the present Congress."

The Vinson-Trammell act authorizes the construction of 102 ships in all categories at a cost estimated between $400,000,000 and $900,000,000, and 1,134 airplanes at a cost of about $96,000,000.

After he signed it, Mr. Roosevelt issued this statement:

Text of Statement.

"Because there is some public misapprehension of fact in relation to the Vinson bill, it is only right that its main provision should be made wholly clear.

"This is not a law for the construction of a single additional United States warship.

"The general purpose of the bill

Insull Changes Ships, Is Report

Destination and Identity on New Vessel Is Not Disclosed.

London, March 27 (AP).—A Reuter's News Agency dispatch from Athens tonight said Samuel Insull had changed from the Greek tramp steamer on which he left Greece to another vessel at the Island of Rhodes, in the Aegean Sea.

The destination of the second craft, not identified, was not determined.

The Majotis, however, was reported to be sailing for Italy. During the last week, authorities in Port Said, Egypt, have been on the alert in the belief that the Majotis was heading for the Suez Canal and some Red Sea haven.

According to the reports, which lacked confirmation, the Majotis was chartered by another person for the trip to Italy.

(In Cannes, France, the possibility was seen that Insull may transfer to a private yacht being fitted out at that place.)

Martin in Police Custody.

Toronto, March 27 (AP).—Martin J. Insull was taken from jail to a hotel room today by Lieut. Frank K. Johnson, of the Chicago police department, preparatory to starting for Chicago to face trial on embezzlement and grand larceny charges.

Thackeray Letter Sells For $3,000 in London

London, March 27 (AP).—A letter William Makepeace Thackeray wrote, praising the book "Jane Eyre," brought $3,000 today at a sale of literary treasures.

Charlotte Bronte wrote "Jane Eyre" under the pen name of Currer Bell, and a number of critics had attacked the work. Thackeray in his letter to a publisher's reader said: "Who the author can be I can not guess. If it is a woman she knows her language. Some of the love passages made me cr—

Data on Stratosphere Planes Sought by Spies, Police Say

Paris, March 27 (AP).—Stratospheric espionage was added to the curriculum of modern spying today.

Investigations by Judge Andre Benon, presiding at the inquiry into the activities of an alleged international spy ring, indicated that certain members of the band sought the military aviation secrets of the stratosphere.

One member specialized in this sort of espionage, Judge Benon was informed, because of the prevailing belief among leading powers that the upper air may play an important role in future wars.

Since Prof. Auguste Piccard and the Russians made experimental flights into the stratosphere, a number of countries are known to have ordered plane developed for use in that region above the earth.

French police today insisted the ring sought information on new French planes and perhaps those of some other nations, chiefly for the benefit of Russia.

Police authorities also intimated that further arrests will be made, some of them in the United States. The officials said they were in contact with American police, who are cooperating.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Switz, the two Americans held in jail here on charges that they were important figures in the ring, may be released on bail after the Easter recess, their attorney said today.

Mrs. Switz developed a secret process for the use of photographic plates which, handled in the normal way, would result in obliteration of the picture, it was charged.

Judge Benon said the inquiry was proceeding beyond his "fondest dreams." He said Mr. and Mrs. Switz had picked out photographs of other persons in the spy ring. Arrests will be based partly on this action, it was indicated.

Miss Perkins Names Glassford Arbiter in Fruit Controversy

Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, former Washington police chief, was appointed yesterday by Secretary Perkins as conciliator in disputes between fruit growers and employes in the California Imperial Valley.

The selection came as the first recognition by the Roosevelt Administration of the man whose bitter controversy with former Attorney General Mitchell over the handling of the 1932 bonus army invasion of Washington created Nationwide discussion. He previously was mentioned for District police commissioner, but the post went to another.

There has been occasional disorder in the Southern California fruit fields for about a year. An investigating committee chosen by the National Labor Board suggested establishment of machinery to settle further difficulties. The Glassford appointment resulted.

Glassford accepted the job by telegraph from his Arizona ranch. The appointment was for a month, but probably will be extended, should the situation warrant.

Though police chief less than a year, Glassford headed the department during the stormiest days in its history. He frequently appeared at the camps of the ex-service men who comprised the "bonus" army and appealed for order.

As a token of their esteem, he was elected treasurer by the veterans. He was in the thick of the fight two years ago which preceded mobilization of troops to drive the veterans from the city. One man was killed before the Army intervened.

Glassford often displayed a flair for the unusual while police chief. He rode through the streets on a motorcycle, frequented social functions, painted landscapes and personally arrested beggars. He quit in disgust because the Commissioners would not permit him to demote subordinates at will.

Roosevelt Aids Plan to Divide Electoral Votes

Amendment Is Proposed to Apportion Ballots by Popular Choice.

The approval of President Roosevelt was given yesterday to a new method of electing a Chief Executive, which, had it been in effect in earlier years, might have changed radically the history of the Nation.

The occasion was presentation to the House Rules Committee of a Constitutional amendment proposed by Representative Lea (Democrat), of California, and Senator Norris (Republican), of Nebraska.

Representative Jeffers (Democrat), Louisiana, acting chairman of the Election Committee, said he had discussed the question with Mr. Roosevelt.

"I was authosized to say," he told the Rules Committee, "that President Roosevelt thought the principle of the proposition was sound and that he wuld be glad to see this propositin put thrugh at this sesin."

Plurality Takes All Votes.

Under present law the Nation has 531 electoral votes divided among the States. New York has, for example, 47, and Nevada 3.

The Presidential candidate who receives a plurality of the votes cast in each State is credited with all the State's electorial votes.

Under the Lea-Norris amendment, a Presidential candidate who receives 75 per cent of the popular ballots in a State with four electoral votes would bet only three electoral votes, while the fourth would be credited to the other candidate.

Under that method, Lea told the rules committee, three of America's past Presidents would have been only unsuccessful candidates.

Cleveland Cited.

The only specific case he had time to mention was that of the 1888 contest between Grover Cleveland and Benjamin Harrison. Had the State unit voting system been in effect, Lea asserted, Cleveland would have been reelected.

Lea said that in 1928 Herbert Hoover received only 49 per cent of the popular vote in New York State and yet got all its 47 electoral votes. In 1928, Alfred E. Smith got 87 electoral votes from States which gave him only 1,700,000 popular votes. Yet, in New York State, where Smith got 2,100,000 votes, he received no electoral ballots whatever.

38 Per Cent Disfranchised.

"In 1928 and 1932," Lea testified, "over 38 per cent of the voters of the country were disfranchised in that manner. With our present laws, it is possible for one-fourth of the voters to elect a President. One man could easily have a million popular majority and yet the other man would get the Presidency."

In 1932, Lea continued, Hoover, seeking reelection, got 59 electoral votes from States in which about 2,000,000 ballots were cast. Yet, in other States, in which he received 13,600,000 votes, he was denied any electoral ballots at all.

Rules Committee Republicans, implying that it would seek to perpetuate existing Democratic control, launched their attack immediately.

Enfranchisement Recruits Sought

Chamber Committee Opens Drive for Members.

Plans for a campaign to enlist members in the movement to secure voting rights for District citizens were discussed yesterday at a meeting of the committee on National representation of the Washington Chamber of Commerce. Representatives of other civic groups attended.

The support, both nationally and locally, for National representation was detailed by Chairman Thomas P. Littlepage. He pointed to the indorsement of the American Federation of Labor and the recent introduction of a favorable resolution of the Virginia Legislature.

The meeting considered the need for putting the activities of the citizens' joint committee on National representation on a permanent basis so that efforts may be intensified.

Jury Disagrees On Fatal Crash

Third Attempt to Convict Bishop Fails.

After twice facing a District grand jury only to have charges against him ignored, Earl Bishop, 32, was tried in Police Court yesterday and the jury disagreed on a charge of leaving the scene of an accident.

Bishop was charged with operating an automobile which struck and killed Peter Harris, of Brentwood, Md., several weeks ago. A grand jury, however, ignored findings of a coroner's jury, which held Bishop responsible in the death.

Bishop previously was exonerated in the fatal shooting of his wife last month. A grand jury refused to indict him. Charges yesterday were continued until April 12.

President's Pay Veto Text

Failure to Provide New Revenue to Remain Within Budget, Refusal to Consider Disability Definition Cited by Roosevelt.

To the House of Representatives:

I return herewith without my approval H. R. 6663, entitled "An act making appropriations for the Executive Office and sundry independent executive bureaus, boards, commissions and offices, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1935, and for other purposes." I am impelled to do this on a number of grounds, any one of them sufficient to require disapproval of the bill.

In March, 1933, the Congress passed and I signed "An act to maintain the credit of the United States Government." This law became one of the principal pillars of National recovery for the clear reason that for the first time in many years the recurring annual expenses for the maintenance of the Government were brought within the current revenues of the Government.

It is true that very large but wholly distinct funds are being dispensed daily for emergency purposes but these funds are going directly to the purpose of saving farms, saving homes and giving relief and employment to millions of our fellow citizens. They are nonrecurring in nature, while the increase contemplated in this bill are continuous and permanent.

Cites Budget Program.

Furthermore, the budget submitted by me to the Congress on January 4, 1934, laid down a definite program of expenditures and a definite estimate of receipts. Because of the emergency expenditures for relief and unemployment, the expected total deficits this year and in 1935 are necessarily large, but at the same time a program for a completely balanced budget by June 30, 1936, was determined upon as a definite objective.

This bill exceeds the estimates submitted by me in the sum of $228,000,000. I am compelled to take note of the fact that in creating this excess the Congress has failed at the same time to provide a similar sum by additional taxation.

Moreover, to the extent that the amount of money appropriated by the Congress is in excess of my budget estimates, and in the absence of provision for additional revenues, there must be a decrease in the funds available for essential relief work.

This bill increases the compensation for employes of the United States Government $125,000,000 over my budget estimates for this purpose. I have great sympathy for the employes, but I can not forget that millions of American citizens are today still without employment, and reduction in the compensation of Federal employes has been and still is on the average less than the reduction in compensation that has been patiently endured by those citizens not in the employ of the United States Government.

Back Pay Held Unwise.

Let me be specific. This bill makes a portion of the restored compensation retroactive to February 1, 1934. I believe it unwise to establish this precedent, and I can not overlook the serious administrative difficulties involved in paying back pay to individuals, many of whom are no longer in the employ of the Government.

The bill also contains several discriminatory provisions, such as paying employes in some departments of the Government 48 hours' pay for 40 hours' work.

In submitting the budget estimates last December, I recommended compensation restoration of 5 per cent for the next fiscal year. The cost of living seems to be rising slowly. The present authority is not responsive enough to changing conditions. I therefore shall be glad to confer with the Congress on improving the methods of restoring Federal pay so that in actual practice the pay will keep ahead of the cost of living increases instead of lagging behind. Adjustments can well be made immediately on the passage of appropriate legislation followed by more frequent adjustments in the future.

I come now to the provisions in this act relating to World War veterans. First let me speak of principles. Last October I said this to the American Legion Convention:

"The first principle, following inevitably from the obligation of citizens to bear arms, is that the Government has a responsibility for and towards those who suffered injury or contracted disease while serving in its defense.

"Disapproves Special Classes."

"The second principle is that no person, because he wore a uniform, must thereafter be placed in a special class of beneficiaries over and above all other citizens. The fact of wearing a uniform does not mean that he can demand and receive from the Government a benefit which no other citizen receives. It does not mean that because a person served in the defense of his country, performed a basic obligation of citizenship, he should receive a pension from his Government because of a disability incurred after his service had terminated, and not connected with that service.

"It does mean, however, that those who were injured in or as a result of their service, are entitled to receive adequate and generous compensation for their disabilities. It does mean that generous care shall be extended to the dependents of those who died in or as a result of service to their country."

I am very confident that the American people, including the overwhelming majority of veterans themselves, approve these principles and in the last analysis will support them.

Applying them to the provisions of this bill I can not give it my approval.

Disability Question Decided.

Last year it was determined—and I had hoped permanently—that a service-connected disability is a question of fact rather than a question of law. In other words, each individual case should and must be considered on its merits and there is no justification for legislative dicta which, contrary to fact, provide that thousands of individual cases of sickness which commenced four, five or six years after the termination of the war are caused by war service.

Therefore local boards were established—boards on which three out of the five members were in no way connected with the Veterans' Administration and on which two-thirds of those serving were former service men. These local boards approved disallowances in the case of 29,000 veterans and these decisions were unanimous in 94 per cent of the cases.

Not content with that, I created a Board of Appeals, the majority of which again are in no way connected with the Veterans' Administration and a majority of which are former service men. This board is now engaged in hearing appeals of those cases disallowed by the local boards.

Plan Was Rejected.

A few weeks ago I gave approval to an amendment the purpose of which was, pending the determination of their appeals, to restore to the rolls at 75 per cent of their compensation, those veterans in whose cases the presumption of service connection was disallowed by the local boards. This, however, was rejected in the Congress. I intend now by regulation forthwith to direct an appeal by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs in each and every one of these disallowed 29,000 cases with the further direction that in the final determination of these cases every reasonable doubt be resolved in favor of the veteran, and every assistance be rendered in the preparation and presentation of these cases.

While these cases are pending the veterans will be paid 75 per cent of the compensation they received prior to the time they were removed from the rolls. If the appeal is allowed they will receive back compensation. Only in cases disallowed by the board of appeals will the veteran thereafter be permanently removed from the rolls. This regulation will be put into effect at once.

By reason of the fact that many totally and permanently disabled veterans have been the recipients of benefits from their Government for a long period of time, it is difficult in the event of a disallowance of service connection by the final board of appeals to remove them completely from the rolls. Existing regulations therefore provide that if their cases are disallowed and if they are found to be totally and permanently disabled they shall, notwithstanding fundamental principles enunciated, if in need, receive $30 a month and domiciliary care and hospitalization.

U. S. Does Much for Veterans.

It is a simple and undeniable fact that the United States, in terms of compensation and in terms of hospitalization, has done and is doing infinitely more for our veterans and their dependents than any other government.

I come now to the provisions of the bill relating to Spanish-American War veterans. To this group of former service men I have devoted much thought. Because of their age they command sympathy. Nevertheless, we must recognize also that many abuses have crept into the laws granting them benefits.

The Spanish-American War veterans' amendment to this act provides for service pensions. This violates the principles upon which benefits to veterans should be paid and the principles to which I have referred in this message. Moreover, if that principle should in the future be applied to the World War veterans at the same rate as contemplated for Spanish-American War veterans by this bill, the annual and continuing charge upon the people of this country by 1949 will amount to more than $830,000,000 for that item alone. This would be in addition to the large cost of all existing veterans' benefits and future hospitalization. This I can not approve.

However, I am today directing the restoration to the rolls of those Spanish-American War veterans who in 1920 were receiving pensions as a result of having sustained an injury or incurred a disease arising out of their war service.

Final Determination Sought.

By regulation 12 a presumption of service origin was extended to Spanish-American War veterans on the rolls on March 19, 1933. In order to take the same action which I am taking in regard to World War veterans, I am directing the restoration to the rolls, as of this date, at 75 per cent of the amount they were receiving on March 19, 1933, all Spanish-American War veterans pending a final determination of their cases before the Board of Appeals.

Without going further into all of the details relating to the treatment—past, present and future—of Spanish-American War veterans, it seems sufficient to repeat that I am wholly and irrevocably opposed to the principle of the general service pension, but I do seek to provide with liberality for all those who suffered because of their service in that war.

As in the case of World War veterans, I shall not hesitate to further alter or modify the regulations in order that substantial justice may be done in every individual case.

What you and I are seeking is justice and fairness in the individual case. I call your specific attention to the fact that since the original regulations were established a year ago actual experience has shown many cases where these regulations required modification.

Has Not Hesitated.

I have not hesitated to take the necessary action and have issued regulations which have made many changes. These changes, based on principles of justice to the individual veteran, involve additional expenditures of approximately $117,000,000. It goes without saying that I shall not hesitate to make further changes if the principles of justice demand them.

On the basis of the original regulations following the economy act, the annual cost to the United States of veterans' relief was $486,000,000. Since that time, by executive order, the addition of $117,000,000 increases to $603,000,000 the total cost for veterans' relief for the fiscal year 1935.

My disapproval of this bill is not based solely on the consideration of dollars and cents. There is a deeper consideration. You and I are concerned with the principles herein enunciated. I trust that the Congress will continue to cooperate with me in our common effort, to restore general prosperity, and relieve distress.

desk with such dispatch that when called to board the train all pressing matters were out of the way.

With most of this just a remembrance in the back of his mind, tomorrow he will set sail with Vincent Astor and a party of old friends for a week's fishing and resting in the neighborhood of the Bahamas, bathed by the warm Gulf Stream. Few are the messages that will get through to him to mar the vacation.

House Upsets Plans.

Anxious "to bat 1000" on the four urgent problems that threatened his vacation before leaving, the President obviously set a goal of solving all of them in the few days remaining. Sunday brought an end to the automobile dispute; yesterday he ended the others, with the possible exception of the veterans' legislation, which the House passed over his veto.

Beginning by moving up his regular Wednesday press conference to accommodate correspondents, he joked about his trip and enumerated the day's objectives. Then he signed the Vinson Navy bill and dictated a statement of hope for future armament reductions, thus adroitly turning the trend of the legislation.

With Joseph B. Eastman, railroad coordinator, he canvassed the rail-labor dispute and then went into a long conference with labor executives. Out of it came an agreement to continue efforts toward mediation, with the White House door still ajar in the event of failure.

Snatching an abbreviated lunch at his office desk, the President sent up the veto message on the veterans-pay restoration measure, which embodied a lengthy discussion of the issues. Another veto message went to the House on a minor bill involving redemption of a lost Liberty bond.

Return Mail Today.

The last of the four pressing problems—the air mail—was solved at an afternoon conference with Post-office Department officials, with announcement of details of the return of the mail to private operators scheduled tomorrow. This came as a welcome load off his mind after the Army's record in flying the mail.

Sandwiched into the day's calendar were two nominations sent to the Senate, a conference with Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson on legislation and, finally, a last minute trip to Naval Hospital to see his youngest son, John, recuperating from an operation for appendicitis.

Accompanying the President on the trip to Jacksonville were only Marvin H. McIntyre, White House secretary; Henry Kannee, secretary to Mr. McIntyre; a few others of the White House staff, and the usual retinue of Secret Service men. Mr. Roosevelt is to embark on the yacht Nourmahal tomorrow, while the remainder of the party goes on to establish headquarters in Miami.

The Nourmahal will put out to sea immediately upon the President's joining the party, presumed to include Kermit Roosevelt, a distant cousin of the President; Dr. Leslie Heiter, Mobile, Ala.; George St. George and Judge Fred Kernochan, both of New York.

Pay Veto Overriden in House, 310 to 72; Senate Votes Today the same if the vote had been delayed a day or a week.

A futile attempt was made in the Senate late yesterday to force a vote in the belief that Administration forces would not have time to line up the necessary members to defeat a two-thirds vote to override the veto.

Senator Robinson, majority leader, was more successful than his colleague in the House, however, and achieved postponement of the vote until today. His motion to adjourn was adopted on a roll call vote by 48 to 34.

Robinson and other Senate leaders pointed out, however, that the ballot on adjournment was in no sense a test of the sentiment on the veto as several members who voted for adjournment have stated definitely they would vote today to override the President.

Long Aids Fight.

Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, led the veterans' bloc in the fight for immediate consideration of the President's message, and he was joined by Senator Huey Long (Democrat), of Louisiana.

Senator McNary, minority leader, however, agreed to the postponement.

The President's message to the House, explaining his veto, while expected, surprised Government pay-restoration advocates by the objection to the compromise plan of restoring 5 per cent retroactive to February 1 and an additional 5 per cent July 1.

Explaining that the bill increased the compensation for Government employes by $125,000,000 over budget estimates, the President said:

"I have great sympathy for the employes, but I can not forget that millions of American citizens are today still without employment, and reduction in the compensation of Federal employes has been and still is on the average less than the reduction in compensation that has been patiently endured by those citizens not in the employ of the United States Government."

Retroactive Feature Hit.

He registered his specific objection to the retroactive feature of the pay amendment on the ground many of the employes who would benefit are no longer in the employ of the Government.

Administrative leaders stated afterward that they believed the President would be willing to approve a 10 per cent restoration July 1 with no restoration this fiscal year.

Quoting from his address to the American Legion last October, Roosevelt said:

"I am very confident that the American people, including the overwhelming majority of veterans themselves, approve these principles and in the last analysis will suport them."

Then, in an obvious move to forestall a defeat of his veto, he announced that he was issuing Executive orders to restore 29,000 World War presumptive cases to the rolls on a basis of 75 per cent of the compensation they received prior to removal and until their cases could be reviewed by the board of appeals.

Veteran Cost Cited.

Likewise, he stated that he was restoring to the rolls the Spanish-American War veterans "who in 1930 were receiving pensions as a result of having sustained an injury or incurred a disease arising out of their war service."

These veterans also would receive 75 per cent of the compensation they were paid prior to the enactment of the economy act.

As for both World War and Spanish-American War veterans, he said, "I shall not hestitate to further alter or modify the regulations in order that substantial justice may be done in each individual case."

The message pointed out that the annual cost to the United States of veterans' relief following the passage of the economy act was $486,000,000. Since that time, he added, executive orders have added $117,000,000, bringing the total to $603,000,000 for the fiscal year 1935. The House amendment which he rejected would have added $83,000,000 for veterans' compensation.

Urges Cooperation.

Finally, the Chief Executive stated that his veto was "not based solely on the consideration of dollars and cents" but that "there is a deeper consideration. You and I are concerned with the principles herein enunciated.

"I trust that the Congress will continue to cooperate with me in our common effort to restore general prosperity and relieve distress."

Prior to the reading of the message the clerk read a communication addressed to the House by E. A. Hayes, National commander of the American Legion, setting forth the legion's demand for veterans' aid.

The letter explained the issues at stake and stated that the President in his executive orders already had adopted one of the legion's three points. The others advocated the restoration of certain service-connected disabled groups and 29,000 presumptive cases to the relief rolls.

After the reading of the President's message, Majority Leader Byrns obtained unanimous consent to address the House for two minutes. He stated that many members had asked that the vote be delayed until today so that they would have time to "read and digest" the message. When the cries of "Vote!" broke out, he said that he would make no such motion, however, and was ready to vote at once himself.

Raps G. O. P. Impatience.

Representative Woodrum then took the floor and attempted to analyze the President's message and to answer multiple questions. So insistent became the demands for a vote, however, that he finally sat down, but not without gently reproving the Republicans for their "impatience."

During the questioning, Representative Weideman (Democrat), Michigan, a leader of the veterans' bloc, said he "has no confidence in the review boards" to which Roosevelt proposed to refer the controversial cases.

Mrs. Isabella Greenway (Democrat), of Arizona, veterans' supporter, received hearty applause when in questioning Woodrum she said: "Does not the gentleman think Congress could help the Administration through legislation to correct the mistakes for which Congress was particularly responsible?"

After Woodrum responded that Congress would be helping the Administration by sustaining the veto, Mrs. Greenway replied:

"May I ask one more question? Are not we here considered any advisory part of the so-called brain trust?"

Joined by 210 Democrats.

In the voting that followed only two Republicans deserted the minority leader to cast their votes to sustain the veto. They were Representatives Luce and Tinkham, both of Massachusetts.

The four Farmer-Laborites present, 96 Republicans and 210 Democrats voted to override the veto. It was significant that the Democratic vote of "aye" was three to one against the Administration.

Following the vote, Minority Leader Snell admitted he was surprised that the majority in favor of overriding the veto had been so large.

"That was the worst trimming any President has ever taken in any Congress," he said. "Every Republican Administration has been able to muster more votes than that behind its President."

"I think the President has his own message to blame. To my mind it was the weakest message a President has ever sent up here. He started by saying he is trying to save money, and ended by saying he is going to give the veterans what they want anyway."

Outcome in Doubt.

During the brief debate in the Senate Senator Clark charged at first that Administration leaders were trying to forestall a vote by holding up the bill in the House for some time after action had been taken.

He also stated that the House veterans amendment which the President rejected was the same as the amendment offered in the Senate by Senator Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, presumbly with Administration backing, and that it was understood that Roosevelt would accept it.

Although he was uncorrected on the floor, Senator Robinson afterward pointed out that he was in error as there are marked differences between the Byrnes proposal and the House amendment.

Senator Robinson declined to predict the outcome of the Senate vote today, but he intimated that he believed enough members could be found to exceed the third necessary to forestall defeat of the veto and passage of the independent offices bill.

French Seize "Revolt" Arms

Threats of Civil War Prompts Wholesale Raids on Left.

Paris, March 27 (A).—A half-dozen secret police raids, motivated by rumors political groups were arming against the government, netted today 100 rifles, pistols, swords, bayonets, and a large supply of ammunition.

The action followed reports that political extremists were collecting arms in workers' districts in preparation for new riots.

At least two persons were arrested. One claimed he was a collector of old weapons, and the other insisted he dealt in second-hand arms.

Thirty automatic pistols, bayonets, swords and rifles were confiscated in another place as the raiders went about their search for evidence that extremists of the Right and Left political camps were preparing for another "civil war." Most of the arms were found in private apartments.

Meanwhile, customs officials kept a watch of French frontiers to prevent arms smuggling. One Belgian workman, arrested yesterday at Roubaix on charges of smuggling weapons, remained in custody.

U. S. Returns Mail to Private Fliers Today

Rules to Be Revealed This Morning May Lift Ban on All Firms.

mail set-up could be revealed until this morning.

Attorney General Cummings, however, indicated he did not believe the statute which bars firms whose mail contracts have been annulled on the grounds of fraud from bidding again within five years, would be an obstacle in the letting of the temporary awards. This statute was passed in 1872.

As revealed in The Post several days ago, a committee has been at work on a plan whereby this statute need not interefere with carrying of the mails by competent companies, provided they have satisfied the Administration of their competence and good faith.

O'Mahoney's Hand Seen.

Former Assistant Postmaster General O'Mahoney, now Senator by appointment from Wyoming, is understood to have reached the ear of President Roosevelt with information regarding the air-mail setup which led to the present decision.

Several measures have been introduced in Congress since the Army took over the flying of the mails February 19, to authorize the Postmaster General to make temporary awards. The obstacle seemed to be whether private companies which held old, canceled contracts should be forced to undergo complete reorganization to be eligible for the new, temporary routes pending framing of a permanent air-mail law.

Provisions of the pending Administration measure would force the retirement of airline officials who participated in the 1930 Washington air-mail conference, before their concerns get new contracts.

McKellar Gives Views.

Senator McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, chairman of the Senate Postoffice Committee, said he believed these companies also would have to get rid of subsidiaries, holding companies and interlocking directorates before becoming eligible, but this was not indicated by last night's developments.

Developments at the 1930 parley, in which former Postmaster General Brown participated, were cited by Farley as evidence of the Administration's right to cancel the existing air-mail contracts. Since cancellation, lives of ten pilots were lost in the taking over of the air-mail service by the Army.

Following announcement that bids for new contracts would be advertised today by the Postoffice Department, Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, vice president of North American Airways, Inc., holding company, issued a statement declaring the proposed plan a "sham."

Rickenbacker Scoffs.

According to Rickenbacker, wartime "ace," awards should be given to commercial carriers without conditions.

"I can see no reason for qualifications or conditions," he told the Associated Press. "What's the purpose of bids?

"As far as carrying the mail goes, we can carry on at an hour's notice—based on fair conditions.

"If they expect all the executives to resign who attended the so-called 'collusive meeting' and the like, they would separate from the industry the only men who are qualified to operate it."

Postoffice officials admitted few concerns, save those which formerly carried the mails, would be able to take it aloft within the near future. They said the Army would continue to fly curtailed schedules until definite arrangements had been made for the private operators to take over.

Byrd to Hibernate Alone Six Months to do it and am making no sacrifice.

"I am not a racio operator, so the radio probably will fail. But this should not be cause for concern."

Snow, driven by the wind, soon will obliterate the roof of the tiny Byrd shack, now level with the hardened ground. All that will be visible when winter sets in will be the radio antennae, the weather vane and the spinning anemometer cups.

Byrd, enthusiastic about the lonely vigil, has equipped the shack with both weather-recording instruments and those for the study of polar meteorological phenomena. Inside the cabin are three radios, one power set and two auxiliary sets powered by a hand generator.

Byrd has familiarized himself with the code and believes he will be able to "send" to his northward base. His call letters are KFY.

The commander does not expect to leave the "first interior weather station maintained on the Antarctic continent" before the first of October, and may remain at the base the full eight-month winter period.

Dr. Thomas C. Poulter, senior scientist of the expedition, will be in charge of the 55 men at Little America.

30,000 at Youngstown.

Youngstown, Ohio, March 27 (U.P.). Thirty thousand Youngstown district steel workers will share in a 10 per cent wage increase expected to become effective her Sunday.

This advance, second of the recovery period, will lift the minimum wage rate paid in Mahoning Valley Mills to 44 cents from 40 cents, currently.

The wage increase, expected to be announced officially tomorrow, will not be accompanied by a reduction in the 40-hour week, it was understood. Thus, the Youngstown area's monthly pay roll will be lifted by more than $300,000 in April.

4,500 in Cleveland Area.

Cleveland, March 27 (U.P.).—Approximately 4,500 men employed by Corrigan-McKinney Steel Co. will be given 10 per cent wage increases on April 1.

The wage increase gave rise to the belief that a general 10 per cent increase throughout the industry would be announced within a few days.

The present base wage rate at Corrigan-McKinney is 42½ cents an hour. The company is operating 14 out of 15 open hearth furnaces. The steel production rate in the Cleveland area this week was at 82 per cent of capacity.

$35,000,000 Increase.

New York, March 27 (U.P.).—The general 10 per cent wage increase in the steel industry would mean an estimated yearly increase of between $30,000,000 and $35,000,000 on the basis of the latest wage figures published in the January bulletin of the American Iron and Steel Institute.

The bulletin shows a monthly total of $26,737,000 for wages, and of $34,875,000 for wages and salaries.

Roosevelt Signs Vinson Navy Bill is solely a statement by the Congress that it approves the building of our Navy up to and not beyond the strength in various types of ships authorized, first, by the Washington naval limitation treaty of 1922 and, secondly, by the London naval limitation treaty of 1930.

Termed Congressional Policy.

"As has been done on several previous occasions in our history, the bill authorizes certain future construction over a period of years. But the bill appropriates no money for such construction and the word 'authorization' is, therefore, merely a statement of the policy of the present Congress. Whether it will be carried out depends on the action of future Congresses.

"It has been and will be the policy of the Administration to favor continued limitation of Naval armaments. It is my personal hope that the Naval conference to be held in 1935 will extend all existing limitations and agree to further reductions."

Present at the signing of the bill were Secretary of the Navy Claude Swanson, Assistant Secretary Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, Representatives Carl Vinson (Democrat), Georgia, and Fred A. Britten (Republican), Illinois.

Danger of Fire In D. C. Relief Homes Denied

Quarters Inspected, Fully Protected, Housing Chief Says.

Washington transient relief quarters are fully equipped to combat fire and are not opened for occupancy until approved by the District Fire Marshal's office.

Capt. Guy Earley, transient housing chief, said yesterday in denying charges that "fire trap" conditions exist in various relief buildings.

"We have ten structures in which transients are housed," he said. "Each building is inspected and approved by the fire marshal before it is occupied."

Only four buildings now used to accomodate transients were former residences, however. Capt. Earley said the majority of quarters were at one time garages, warehouses and basements. One building, an old firehouse at Fourteenth street and Ohio avenue northwest, admittedly a fire trap, will be vacated Saturday. New quarters will be established near Second and B streets northwest.

Each building, housing from 50 to 300 men, is equipped with fire extinguishers and meet fire regulations in every way, Capt. Earley declared.

Wirt Demands "Full" Inquiry Or None at All

Won't Agree to Produce Names; Professors Attack Charges.

Gary, Ind., March 27 (AP).—Dr. William A. Wirt wants a "full investigation or none" of his charge that unnamed "brain trusters" were planning a revolution and told him so.

He announced this today while Congressmen sought to decide what, if anything, to do about the "expose" made by the Gary school superintendent in his recent letter to James H. Rand, jr.

By a "full investigation," Dr. Wirt said, he meant something more than an investigation of who told him and what he was told. He prefers an investigation of the entire "New Deal" and said he thought it could be made by studying all legislation passed up to date. He excepted, however, the money legislation, which he favored.

"The revolution hasn't been covered in secrecy," he explained. "It is revealed in the legislation."

Will Give Names, "Maybe."

As for giving names, Dr. Wirt said "maybe."

"I'll be delighted to go to Washington, particularly if they have a full, public investigation," he said.

"But I don't agree to reveal the names. I'll do that provided it's necessary and when it's necessary. I feel it might sidetrack the real issue—the calamity which threatens."

"If I named my informants, there would be denials and the matter would be whitewashed."

Telegraph messengers and a constantly busy phone continued today to disturb the modest house where the Gary school superintendent lived his—up to now—quiet life.

Many telegrams were from fellow members of the "Committee for the Nation," a group of industrialists who have campaigned for devaluation and against tighter rule of the securities markets.

Advised to Take Attorney.

They advised Dr. Wirt, if he went to Washington, to take along an attorney.

"I don't need an attorney to help me tell what I want to tell," Dr. Wirt said.

The Wirt revolution drew comment from Senator James Hamilton Lewis (Democrat), Illinois, among others. In Chicago to try a lawsuit, Senator Lewis defended the "brain trust" as a group of "patriotic and faithful Americans."

The House of Representatives heard briefly about the Wirt affair when Representative Foulkes (Democrat), Michigan, saw in it a plot within a plot. He said he regarded Dr. Wirt's statement as a part of a "Nazi plot" engineered by "Hitlerugems."

Disgruntled Lobby Blamed for Charges

Chicago, March 27 (U.P.).—Startling charges which drew widespread attention to the "brain trust" and a possible Communistic revolution were characterized today as the propaganda of a disgruntled lobbying group.

Prof. Harry Gideonse, University of Chicago economist, although an opponent of practically every idea advanced by the so-called "brain trust" of Administration advisers, came to their defense.

Gideonse identified Dr. William A. Wirt as the organizer of a lobbying group, the "Committee for the Nation." He expressed disbelief in the charges and advanced a motive for their origin.

He charged that the "Committee for the Nation" hopes to force President Roosevelt to continue with a program of monetary inflations. The present members of the "brain trust" were credited with blocking further inflation several months ago, after the committee succeeded in pushing it forward for a period of months.

Ogburn Assails Wirt.

Prof. William F. Ogburn, who favors the Administration program, added the following charge to Gideonse's.

"I challenge him (Wirt) to name one man in the "brain trust" who is not interested in the recovery and welfare of the country. I know most of the New Dealers personally and I say that Wirt's statements are untrue and ridiculous."

Gideonse enlarged upon his charges as follows:

"The Committee for the Nation, a self-constituted group, is doing everything in its power to advance the inflation program. The opposition of the "brain trust" to the lobby's desired led to Dr. Wirt's outburst.

"At the present time there is also the Fletcher-Rayburn exchange bill sponsored by the "brain trust," which would give the Government control over inflation through margin requirements. This bill meets the opposition of the committee."

Leaders in Congress Agree On Probe of Wirt Charges

He listed as "others who may or may not be members" of the union, William C. Bullitt, Ambassador to Russia; Dr. Mordecai Ezekiel, AAA; Sidney Hillman, NRA, and former Senator Smith W. Brookhart, AAA.

Charges Involve Others.

"In addition," said Representative Fish, "it is estimated there are about a score or more of young radicals, so-called economic experts and lawyers, of Felix Frankfurter's (Harvard professor) school of thought, most of whom are disciples of Karl Marx."

The New York Representative, who several years ago directed a House committee investigation of Communism, quoted from the committee report, charging 90 per cent of the work done by the Civil Liberties Union is "on behalf of Communists."

Defending the Wirt allegations in the Senate, Senator Schall declared the Bankhead cotton tax bill now under discussion is in line with the radical trend in Congressional legislation pointed out by the Gary (Ind.) school superintendent.

"Idiots laugh when Dr. Wirt alleges the fires of incendiary Communism are abroad in our land," he said.

Ridiculed by Johnson.

He was interrupted by Senator Hugo Black (Democrat), Alabama, who quoted articles making light of the Wirt incident, and by Senator Johnson, who referred to his boyish enthusiasm for Lewis Carroll's masterpiece.

"But Dr. Wirt's remarks have neither the charm of the Baron Munchausen, nor the delightful literary style of 'Alice in Wonderland,'" he remarked.

He said he had "no fear of a dictator" in the Presidency, nor that Congress will abdicate its powers."

Today's rules committee meeting of the Bulwinke resolution was called by Representative John J. O'Connor (Democrat), New York, in the absence of Chairman Edward W. Pou.

It was requested by Representative Alfred L. Bulwinkle, North Carolina Democrat, who drafted the resolution after hearing the Wirt letter read at last Friday's meeting of the House Interstate Commerce Committee.

Majority Leader Byrns said he indorsed the action, "so we can go to the bottom of this thing, and there can be no implication that anyone is trying to cover up."

"The investigation itself shouldn't take more than two days," he said. "First, we should bring Dr. Wirt here and ask him to name his men. If he names anybody, we should call them. If he doesn't, there is no reason to go any farther."

Sees 'Hitlerism.'

Byrns said he favored an investigation by a special committee, but Representative Dickstein said he would insist the matter be turned over to the special propaganda committee Congress already has authorized.

Dickstein was supported on the House floor by Representative Foulkes, who charged "Hitlerism" is behind the allegations and said the Dickstein committee "must by no means fail to take cognizance of the activities of Dr. Wirt."

"The trouble with Dr. Wirt seems to be a 'brainstorm,' I am told, that followed the drunken debauch of his maudlin informers." Foulkes said in a statement introduced for the Record.

"In an orgy in which certain people seem to have consumed 'strange drinks and had strange thinks,' and in which their brains deserted them, they conceived the nightmare that the 'brain trust' was engaged in Communistic deviltry.

"If those who told Dr. Wirt these yarns had kept sober, and if he had been less gullible, all of this excitement never would have occurred. That is, assuming he is honestly deceived—for I prefer to think that he has been bamboozled instead of believing that he is deliberately in the employ of Hitler."

Cotton Limit Bill Passage Slated Today

Both urged that its provisions be made an experiment for one year only.

Confining the bill's provisions to this year's cotton crop, voted on motion of Senators Reynolds and Dickinson (Republican), Iowa, was the major amendment of the day. As passed by the House the bill authorized the Secretary of Agriculture to proclaim a limitation on cotton production for the next two crop years, if desired by two-thirds of the cotton growers, and gave the President power to extend the bill for another year after that.

All this was wiped out. As the bill now stands it provides that the cotton production for this year should be a maximum of 10,000,000 bales, allocated among States, counties and farmers. Any farmer seeking to have ginned more cotton than his allocation would have to pay a heavy penalty tax on the excess.

Outcome Held Doubtful.

In urging adoption of the amendment limiting the operation of the bill to one year, several Senators contended that if the plan were successful it could be continued a year hence by Congress. Senator Reynolds insisted it was not wise to enact a three or four year plan of this kind when the outcome was doubtful.

How many of the Senate amendments will remain in the bill after it goes to conference was problematical. The Administration leaders did not seek to stop amendments offered to the bill, all of which were adopted viva voce. The aim of the sponsors of the bill seemed to get it passed as quickly as possible, apparently trusting to eliminate unsatisfactory amendments in the conference.

The penalty tax in the original bill was 50 per cent of the market value of the cotton, or a minimum of 5 cents a pound. On motion of Senator Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, this tax was increased by the Senate to 75 per cent of the market value, or a minimum of 8 cents a pound.

Senator Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina, in another speech denouncing the bill, proposed that the first eight bales of a cotton farmer's production be exempted from the penalty tax. Advocates of the bill replied that if such an amendment were adopted the bill might as well be abandoned, since the average production is now seven bales per planter.

After Senator Bailey agreed to modify his proposal to permit every planter to gin free of the tax at least six bales of cotton, the Senate adopted the amendment. Another amendment adopted also exempted from the bill long-staple cotton.

Senator Johnson (Republican), California, persuaded the Senate to write into the bill that the allotment of no cotton producing State should be less than 200,000 bales for the year, after an amendment was adopted making a ten-year average, instead of a five-year average, the basis of allocating the maximum production.

Senator Bankhead sponsored another amendment which was adopted without a record vote. It provided that a planter harvesting more cotton than his allotment, may carry over into a subsequent year his excess production, provided he makes a corresponding reduction in that year's crop. The amendment also would permit a planter who did not produce his full allotment in the first year to make it up in a subsequent year.

These provisions were adopted before the Reynolds-Dickinson amendment limiting the bill's operation to one year was voted. But they remained in the measure after that action was taken.

The chief speech on the bill during the hearing came from Senator Hastings, of Delaware, chairman of the Republican Senatorial campaign committee. He recalled that during the 1932 campaign President Roosevelt, in speaking of his plans for farm relief, had said that whatever was done "must be voluntary and the individual producer at all times shall have the opportunity of nonparticipation if he so desires."

Action, Promises, Differ.

He contended this was another example of Democratic promises differing from Democratic action and warned that "what we have done and what we are about to do leaves the business man, the farmer and the wage earner in so uncertain a position that we shall find this country at the tail end of world recovery."

Senator Bailey, reiterating that the bill was unconstitutional and citing rulings of the Supreme Court to uphold that view, also maintained that it was uneconomic and predicted that as soon as American cotton production is reduced, the British in the Nile Valley and in India will start cotton production and take the world market away from the United States.

Man Held for Jury In Church Gunplay

Husband of Intended Victim Guilty.

Pleading guilty to firing a shot which disrupted Palm Sunday services at the East Calvary Methodist Episcopal Church, William Foster, colored, 35, was arraigned in Police Court yesterday and ordered held for grand jury action under $3,000 bond.

A bullet, allegedly intended for Foster's wife, Viola Foster, 28, who was attending the services, went astray and struck the pulpit near the Rev. Paul L. Moore.

Foster is reported then to have struck his wife with the gun. The Rev. Mr. Moore, indignant at the interruption of his sermon, tossed a vase which hit Foster on the head. Members of the congregation chose sides and a battle royal ensued.

Wine Vintage System now used for Cigars

White Owl adopts a Grade A "VINTAGE" band as a Guarantee of Fine Filler Tobacco

NO MORE GUESSWORK for 5¢ cigar smokers. Now you can be sure with "Vintage" cigars.

Everyone knows that wines are better in "Vintage" years. Variations in sunshine, rain and soil actually alter the taste and flavor of each vineyard crop. It's the same way with cigar filler tobacco. A rich, fertile field may produce "Vintage" leaf one year—a poor crop the next.

Now all White Owl Cigars in Washington carry a Grade A "Vintage" band . . . and it means what it says. That's why you can be sure of a milder, full-flavored smoke when you light a White Owl.

Today we are using in the filler of White Owls two famous "Vintage" crops . . . the 1931 Pennsylvania and the 1930 Ohio. Look for the Grade A "Vintage" band.

How White Owl Smokers are Protected

THE General Cigar Co., through a 10-year-old Crop Control System, knows the condition of tobacco-growing districts in Pennsylvania and Ohio—the two states which produce nearly all United States cigar filler tobaccos. The amount of rainfall . . . of sunshine . . . the condition of the soil—are all recorded. From these records, it is possible to forecast every "Vintage" crop . . . and only tobaccos from such crops are purchased for White Owls.

But "Vintage" crops alone are not enough. Under the control system—all filler tobaccos are classified into seven grades. Only the top three grades pass White Owl's strict requirements. That's why we can truthfully say—White Owls are made only from Grade A "Vintage" filler tobaccos.

At the present moment, there is enough Grade A "Vintage" filler tobacco aging in our warehouses to make over 1 billion White Owls—more than a three-year supply. That is why White Owl never has to use non-vintage filler tobaccos.

Grade A "Vintage" filler tobacco is aged from 2 to 4 years—an average of 3 years.

3-Part FERA Plan Outlined To Virginians

County Directors Meet at Fredericksburg to Get Details.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 27 (Spl.).—Federal Emergency Relief directors from surrounding counties met with Miss Ann Saunders, FERA field operator, today to outline a three-part spring relief plan, and to discuss the FERA's part in replacing the CWA.

The first part of the program comprised subsistence gardens to be administered by supervisors in each district appointed by the State home demonstration department. Beneficiaries will be restricted to new families from relief lists.

Rural rehabilitation on a "work relief basis" is the second part of the program. The Government will provide farms, equipment, and financial aid to a given number of families in each district, enabling each one to begin a farm which they will be expected to make permanently self-sustaining. All Government aid must be repaid by work on the farms.

Relief cases will be granted sufficient work to earn a minimum stipend in the works division of the new FERA program, which is designed principally for urban relief. Work will be granted on a strictly budgetary basis. Projects will be financed by local governments, with wages advanced by the Federal Government.

Those attending included Nell Johnston, Fredericksburg; Susan Dickinson, Spotsylvania County; Mrs. Katherine Moncure, Stafford County; Mrs. Ruth Thompson, Fauquier County; Mrs. Marion Lewis, Prince William County; A. W. Boeringer, Alexandria; Mrs. Blanche Melvin, Loudoun County; Mrs. Eleanor Aud, Fairfax County, and D. J. Colman, Culpeper County. Miss Saunders said committees and administrative officials will be selected soon.

Mothers' Day Stamp Sought

Fredericksburg Mayor Suggests Likeness of Mary Washington, Mother of First President, Be Printed on Special Issue.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 27 (Spl.).—That a likeness of Mary Washington, mother of the First President, be printed on the special stamp to be issued May 13 in commemoration of Mother's Day, was suggested yesterday in a telegram from Mayor Robert J. Payne, of Fredericksburg, to Postmaster General James A. Farley.

Postmaster General Farley is said to have stated the stamp would bear a reproduction of Whistler's famous painting of his mother.

Mayor Payne's communication was prompted by Benjamin T. Pitts, president-elect, of the Fredericksburg Chamber of Commerce. Local authorities plan to take up the matter with Gov. Peery through the State Chamber of Commerce.

Washington's mother spent more than three decades on a farm across the Rappahannock River from Fredericksburg, and the last 16 years of her life were passed in the Mary Washington House, an edifice acquired and reconstructed for her by the First President. This shrine, where Washington said farewell to his dying mother, stands here in its original condition.

The Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities, custodians of the shrine, plan a Mother's Day celebration at the home, to which they have invited Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of President Roosevelt.

CWA District 3 Expects FERA To Finish Jobs

Lacking Instruction Office at Fredericksburg Closes Saturday.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 27 (Spl.).—The statement of Washington CWA officials that there will be "no unfinished CWA monuments" leads local authorities to believe some provision will be made to complete work in District 3.

No instructions have been received, however, and it is planned to close local and district offices Saturday night.

It is considered likely that a skeleton of the existing CWA organization will be transferred to the Federal Emergency Relief Association and the incompleted work continued.

Phillip N. Stern, Fredericksburg architect and chairman of the Virginia Division of the Historic Buildings Survey being conducted under the CWA, yesterday stated he had received no instructions as to discontinuance of CWA activities.

West Virginia's Tax to Become Law on Sunday

Purchasers Must Pay One Cent Levy on Every Half Dollar.

Charleston, W. Va., March 27 (Spl.).—Except for articles selling for 5 cents or less, everything sold in West Virginia during the next 15 months will be subject to the 2 per cent consumers' sales tax just enacted by the State Legislature in its emergency revenue measure.

The House of Delegates fought vainly to provide exemptions for foodstuffs and other necessities.

Printed copies of the revenue bill are being circulated throughout the State. The law is effective April 1. The 50 per cent boost in existing rates on utilities and other corporations is made retroactive in order to cover the fiscal biennium.

"On each sale where the monetary consideration is from 6 cents to 50 cents, both inclusive, the tax payable by the purchaser shall be 1 cent," the sales tax section of the law reads. "On each sale where the monetary consideration is from 51 cents to $1, both inclusive, the tax shall be 2 cents; and on each 50 cents of such monetary consideration, or fractional part thereof, in excess of $1, the tax shall be 1 cent."

No new registration for an automobile and no transfer of title thereto shall be issued by the State until the tax is paid.

Fort Frederick Will Be Restored

CCC Workers to Rebuild Pre-Revolution Post.

Hagerstown, Md., March 27 (Spl.). Fort Frederick, built in 1715, one of the few remaining fortresses of pre-Revolutionary War days, 15 miles west of here, will be restored to a semblance of what it was 150 years ago by CCC workers this summer, announces Robert Fechner, director of the corps.

The fort, part of whose walls remain, was used first to protect settlers against Indians during the French and Indian War. During the Civil War it was manned by Northern troops.

The walls, the great gate and the platform running around the inside wall will be restored, also the foundation walls of officers' quarters.

Virginia Towns Plead for "Cut" In Rum Profits

Governor Urged to Sign Bill for Distribution of 10 Per Cent.

Richmond, March 27 (AP).—Virginia localities today pressed Gov. Peery for his signature on the Daughtrey-Moffett bill providing for a distribution of 10 per cent of liquor profits among them on a population basis.

City, county and town officials, in cooperation with the League of Virginia Municipalities, appeared before the Governor.

The bill provides that the localities are to receive 10 per cent of the State's profit from the legal sale of liquors, in addition to the local revenue from licenses and permits.

The new alcoholic beverages control law provides that the localities are to receive two-thirds of the net profits from the business after $1,000,000 is set up by the State as a reserve fund, and after an additional $1,675,000 is sent into the State treasury for general fund expenditures.

The localities, however, emphasized their opinion that during the first two years the profits probably will not exceed $1,675,000. They urged the signing of the bill because they said their funds were depleted by relief necessities. They added that the localities would pay the cost of enforcing the liquor law.

Among the spokesmen were Delegate Daughtrey, of Emporia; Mayor J. Fulmer Bright, of Richmond; Assistant City Attorney Old, of Norfolk; R. M. Lett, city attorney, Newport News; R. C. Barclay, city attorney, Portsmouth; Mayor F. H. Wheeler, of Clifton Forge; V. Von Gimmingen, town manager of Front Royal; W. F. Das, county manager of Henrico; Percy Carmel, town attorney of Phoebus; W. E. Moore, town attorney of Waynesboro; State Senator John Battle, of Charlottesville, and Wallace Lawrence, city manager of Alexandria.

Automatic Gas Water Heater"

"Now this just shows you what I have observed ever since I've been here—and proves my point about automatic hot water. Water for my bath is either heated in a tea kettle over the kitchen stove, or two hours late waiting for the light-it-every-time-you-want-hot-water type of heater we have in our basement at present.

"Both methods are out of date. 'Course, I don't mind my bath running cold so much and waiting for more water to heat. But take the family as a whole. It seems to me that a lot of grief could be saved by having hot water constantly on tap for bathing, shaving, the dishes, house cleaning . . .

Virginia Award To Oil Concern Held Code Rap

Violation of Agreements Charged by Head of State Board.

Norfolk, March 27 (AP).—E. J. Schul, chairman of the State Petroleum committee, said today that award by the State highway commissioner of a contract to the Motor Service Oils, Inc., to supply motor fuel for State use in five counties in southwest Virginia constituted a direct violation of the petroleum code.

He asserted that as a result of this the State is in danger of losing a Federal aid appropriation of $2,500,000.

"If Commissioner Shirley does not comply with the code," he said, "we will attempt to have Federal aid shut off in accordance with the President's proclamation of March 14, which set forth that Federal aid would be cut off from any city, county or State that did not comply with any and all terms of any and all codes."

The Virginia code provides that bids shall be based on the prevailing retail market price and prohibits the awarding of contracts on a flat basis.

Mr. Schul has notified authorities in Washington that the Appalachia contract was based on a flat price, and thereby in direct conflict with the petroleum agreement.

Farm Animals Gain in State

Cows, Hogs and Sheep Over Maryland Found on Increase.

Baltimore, March 27 (Spl.). Maryland farm animals are increasing, according to the annual inventory by Richard C. Ross, agricultural statistician for the Maryland Crop Reporting Service.

There are 190,000 milch cows in the State now compared with 188,000 last year, and 186,000 in 1932. The number of yearling heifers total 27,000, an increase of 3 per cent over 1933. Swine increased to 181,000, and sheep to 109,000, and the total number of cattle in the State has grown to 285,000.

A 6 per cent decrease, however, was found in the number of horses which this year total only 84,000. The decrease is attributed to the 1933 outbreak of ancephalemyelitis in southern and eastern Maryland, but an increase in the number of young colts, now 5,000 head on Maryland farms, promises a better outlook for this year.

Values were found to be higher in all live stock, and the total value of live stock throughout the State was estimated at $19,521,000, an increase of 9 per cent over last year.

Police Hunt Poison Death "Mystery Man"

Deathbed Statement of Young Bride Opens New Search.

Portsmouth, Va., March 27 (Spl.). Portsmouth and Norfolk County police today were without clews to the mysterious man who wore kid gloves and who forced Mrs. Elnora Ferrell, 17, to drink poison from which she died Sunday.

Police were inclined to believe the girl may have taken her own life, but from her deathbed statement, in which she said a man forced her to drink the poison, and their failure to find the empty bottle, the police were inclined to believe that Mrs. Ferrell may have been Miss Eleanor Fitts, who on September 25 last drank cleaning fluid with suicidal intent.

Police Lieut. T. A. Talbert, who is investigating the case, says the girl attempted to borrow a revolver a few days before she drank the poison.

Opposing the suicide theory is the girl's statement repeated several times on her deathbed. She said gloved hands grabbed her in the darkness. With one hand, her mouth was forced open and with the other poison was poured down her throat.

The police sought her estranged husband, Jack Andrew Ferrell. It was learned that he had not been in Portsmouth for several weeks. They were married January 13.

The girl's body was forwarded to Henderson, N. C., today for funeral services.

Norfolk Sets Primary Plan

Means of Nominating to Be Determined at Session Today.

Norfolk, Va., March 27 (Spl.).—Owing to Congressional business in Washington, Representative Colgate W. Darden, jr., will be unable to attend the meeting of the Second District Congressional committee at council chamber, Norfolk, tomorrow, when the method of nominating a candidate to be elected in November will be determined.

A majority of the committee is committed, it is understood, to a call for a primary in August with the lists of candidates to close in June. There may be no Democratic opposition to Mr. Darden, who let it be known that he is in favor of a primary.

While he has not announced his candidacy for renomination, it is believed certain that he will seek a second term.

So far there has been no activity on the part of Republicans to choose a candidate for Congress, but among those mentioned is Geroud M. Rumble, Norfolk lawyer.

Danville Nearing Local Option Test

Mass Meeting Demanded to Sound Opinion.

Danville, Va., March 27 (Spl.).—Danville today moved nearer a test on the liquor dispensary issue as result of the action of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in adopting a resolution calling on the Danville ministry to organize a mass meeting to sound out opinion on local option.

Such a meeting probably would start circulation of petitions calling for an election. The dry forces have remained organized since the end of the National prohibition, but the wets have no organization.

Local merchants are eager for a test, fearing that so long as a close division of opinion remains here, the alcoholic beverage control board will defer opening a dispensary. It is expected that the Rev. F. R. Chenault will lead the dry campaign.

Of special interest will be examples of plant life peculiar to the Glacial Era, taken from Cranberry Glades in Pocahontas County, and original paintings of strange plant specimens from the American Nature Society.

Central Trust To Start Paying Claims Shortly

Receiver's Report Ratified for Closed Bank at Frederick.

Frederick, Md., March 27 (Spl.).—An order was field in the circuit court yesterday by Judge Arthur D. Willard ratifying the report of John J. Ghingher, State bank commissioner and receiver for the closed Central Trust Co., accounting for the receivership since its inception to this time, and permitting payment by the receiver of preferred claims allowed by the court against the assets of the bank.

The time for filing exceptions to the report expired yesterday. Since no objections were made, Judge Willard ratified the report.

The court's orders will permit distribution of all preferred claims allowed by the court. Payments will begin soon, former Judge John S. Newman, counsel for the receiver, said today. The 385 preferred claims total $308,275.53 and include $78,517.68 of the $330,807.07 deposits of the county commissioners and $34,566.35 of depositers of the register of wills. The 126 claims previously listed by the court as preferred, totaling $174,362.83, will be paid in full. There are also 199 claims which will participate in the cash distribution which came into the hands of the receiver at the time he took over the liquidation of the defunct bank. These claims total $564,264.45, of which $133,912.70 will be paid, representing a preference to the extent of 23 per cent. Payment of the preferred claims will be the first funds issued from the bank since it went into the hands of the receiver September 3, 1931.

Recently the court authorized the receiver to collect the double liability of stockholders. A large number of stockholders claimed they should be exempt from the double liability on the ground that the bank was insolvent at the time they purchased stock, but the court dismissed the petition.

Horse's Comeback In Valley Revives Harness Making

Luray, Va., March 27 (Spl.).—Page County harness makers, who 15 or 20 years ago were forced to relinquish their trade as automobile tractors displaced horses, are coming back and opening up their shops in Page County.

Demands for horses are pyramiding, while automobile and tractor buying is waning.

The score of old-time tanyards of this county, now marked only by pits where vats converted cattle hides into leather, will be revived as harness making takes on a new spirit, unless all signs fail, say old residents.

Delinquent Taxes Stagger Roanoke

City Strives to Collect $1,500,000.

Roanoke, Va., March 27 (Spl.). Roanoke faces the problem of collecting $1,500,000 in delinquent taxes, in addition to $250,000 in delinquent land taxes dating back before 1931.

Delinquent taxes on January 1 totaled $1,664,781.84, according to P. Hill Tucker, city clerk and auditor. On that date $561,245.08 of the 1933 tax levy, plus an aggregate penalty of $28,061.97, which was added on December 6, remained uncollected. Of the 1932 tax levy, $312,896.68 was still unpaid, and $181,969.10 remained uncollected from the 1931 levy. Delinquent personal property taxes prior to 1931 amounted to $330,131.24.

Much of the personal property taxes delinquent since before 1931, is conceded to be uncollectible. Eliminating that, the city still has $1,334,650 in back taxes.

Winchester, Va., March 27 (Spl.). A committee from the Loudoun Street Presbyterian Church here will be present when a committee of the Norfolk Presbytery holds a hearing at Norfolk Thursday on a resolution from Lafayette Street Presbyterian Church, Norfolk, declining to accept the resignation of its pastor, the Rev. E. B. McGukin.

The Rev. Mr. McGukin offered his resignation Sunday to accept a call to the church here to succeed the Rev. Dr. Frank T. McFaden, who died last August.

Under Presbyterian Church canons, a minister may not take up another pastorate until the Presbytery accepts his resignation.

The local church committee includes Stewart Bell, John S. Scully, jr., and J. Henry Moling, jr., the committee which selected Mr. McGukin to be pastor here.

The Rev. Mr. McGukin had planned to assume the Winchester pastorate the first Sunday in April.

State Closes Case in Trial Of Berry Clark

Jury Due to Hold Fate of Former Montgomery Official Tomorrow.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Ellicott City, Md., March 27.—Unexpected closing of the State's case in the trial of Berry E. Clark on embezzlement charges here today found the defense without witnesses and a threatened night session was averted.

Judge William Henry Forsythe, jr., presiding, had announced that a night session was to be held to hurry the case to completion, and had requested State's Attorney Stedman Prescott, of Montgomery County, not to introduce evidence which was not necessary.

Following testimony by Charles Y. Latimer, who succeeded Clark as clerk to the Montgomery County Commissioners, that a check he received for $1,023 for preparation of delinquent tax lists was his own and not that of Clark as the defense claimed, the State announced its case closed at 3:10 p. m.

Latimer admitted receiving the check, but declared the commissioners had decided he and not Clark was entitled to it. The defense then required Latimer to produce a bill sent to the commissioners by Clark, claiming the money as due him, and to which was attached the affidavit of J. Forest Walker, county treasurer, that the work had been done by Clark.

Defense Attorney F. Barnard Welch told the judge that he expects to show that Clark had every expectation of receiving the money and that this would tend to prove he had no criminal intent even if he had spent the money claimed by the State.

Robert D. Hagner, county commissioner, who audited the accounts of the county in 1929 and 1930, was placed on the stand as the first defense witness. He identified his audit reports, which lauded the books of the county officials as being in good condition.

It is expected that the defense will rest its case tomorrow night, and that the case will go to the jury by Thursday. Judge Forsythe announced a night session will be held tomorrow.

'Kidnaped' Girl Tried as Faker

Denies Charge of Perjury After Two Men Were Held One Week.

Bel Air, Md., March 27 (AP)—The perjury trial of Marie Ball, 16, accused of faking a kidnaping story that provoked the arrest of two Negroes, was begun in Harford County Circuit Court today, but was interrupted by the absence of two important witnesses. The girl denies the charge.

They are Leo and Norman Coe, brothers, whom the State contends the girl was visiting Sunday, December 10, during the time she said she was kidnaped by two men. Summonses were sent for the brothers.

The State claims she was late in getting home and invented the kidnaping story because she feared punishment. Two Negroes, George Hayman and Ross Jones, were arrested subsequently and were identified by Miss Ball as her abductors. They spent more than a week in jail.

The girl is the sister of several well-known steeplechase jockeys.

Richmond, March 27 (Spl.).—Virginia NRA headquarters announced here today that instructions had been received to prepare all cases involving violations of approved codes for court action in the event enforcement can not be effected by other means.

"AN EYE TO THE FUTURE — AN EAR TO THE GROUND"

—this describes General Motors' policy, a policy by which the public is given what it wants in better cars year after year, and yet is safely protected against ill-timed or dubious experiments

"When GM does it you know it's going to click"

YOU'VE probably heard people express their trust in General Motors in just such words as those.

But what they're saying right now is even more emphatic:

"Look at No-Draft Ventilation. Look at Knee-Action Wheels. Look at the way General Motors developed the idea of streamlining and did it in styles that say beauty as well as speed.

"That's sure calling the turns—and General Motors called all three."

The real admirers of General Motors will point to what's back of all this.

They'll tell you that General Motors built the first Proving Ground—in order to experiment at its own expense, not the public's.

Then they'll point to the "Proving Ground of Public Opinion"—more than a million question booklets sent out each year, to check General Motors' vast engineering knowledge against what people want.

And there you begin to see why people have such confidence in anything that General Motors builds. They know they're dealing with a pioneer willing to listen as well as lead.

The three outstanding advancements in modern automobiles—NO-DRAFT VENTILATION, KNEE-ACTION WHEELS, STREAMLINE DESIGN—are each and all General Motors contributions!

This medallion commemorates the twenty-fifth anniversary of General Motors and of its public-minded interest in the advancement of motor transportation

Homer For The Bleachers.

From two diverse sources come pleas that the "Odyssey" be filmed. One is from that ultra-respectable journal, the London Times, which points out that the Hollywood magnates, unnerved by a recent court decision on the Rasputin film, are fearful of producing further historical dramas. The Times embroiders our own shy suggestion that if the producers go back far enough they will be safe. If the "Volsunga Saga," the "Song of Roland," or the Arthurian legend, are too recent for Hollywood, there is always the "Odyssey" waiting to be filmed.

It would seem that both the Times and ourselves have missed the point. James Thurber, that mad rascal who helps edit the New Yorker, is another lover of the "Odyssey" who yearns to see it on what they used to call the silver screen. But he has some definite suggestions to make. Having been carried away by a moving picture presented last season, he rhapsodizes over the work of its director and cries out loudly for the "Odyssey." And none should make it but Walt Disney. "Picture Mr. Disney's version of the overcoming of the giant, the escape tied to the sheep, the rage of Polyphemus as he hurls the top of mountains at the fleeing ship of Ulysses and his men! * * * His 'Odyssey' can be, I am sure, a far, far greater thing than even his epic of the three little pigs. Let's all write to him about it, or to Roosevelt."

Yes, let us all add our voices to this public demand. Mr. Hays should lend receptive ears, for he, too, thinks that Walt Disney is the greatest man in the world. In his annual report, just made public, he philosophises upon riots and revolutions, and says, in effect, that it is only the industry which he heads that has kept the flow of revolutionary rivers from inundating us all. "Historians of the future will not ignore the interesting and significant fact that the movies literally laughed the big bad wolf of depression out of the public mind through the protagonism of 'Three Little Pigs!' "

Surely if it is Walt Disney, and not the New Deal or the Brain Trust, who swept away the depression, he is big enough of mind, and broad enough of soul, to take the "Odyssey" and make of it the super-super-spectacle of all time, the epic to end epics. With Ulysses, Walt Disney and Will Hays combining their superb intellects, and Mr. Thurber doing the dialogue, here would be a film that ought to carry even the Times off its feet. We have succumbed already.

A Mess Of Pottage.

The most encouraging aspect of the debate on the Bankhead bill is the fact that a few senators forgot about cotton and concentrated their remarks upon human liberties. When the measure comes to a vote the majority probably will be thinking in terms of cotton, but the emphatic protest of the few who see the basic implications of this bill may assist in arousing the public to a realization of the trend our economic revolution is taking.

Advocates of the bill consider it an essential step to bring the noncooperating element into line with the Government's program of curtailed cotton production. Most of them disclaim any thought of subjecting the American farmer to collectivism. Yet they realize that the present experiment in voluntary acreage curtailment calls for another step. That step is regimentation of the farmer by a centralized bureaucracy. The tendency is for members of Congress as well as the farmers themselves to ignore this threat to the ideal of individual liberty and to fix their attention upon the price of an agricultural commodity.

Clearly, however, the issue is not cotton. "In actuality," said Senator Bailey, a cotton-belt Democrat, "it is a slavery bill. It is not an economic bill; it is an organic bill." If the Secretary of Agriculture is given power to tell every farmer how much cotton he may sell and to impose fines or prison sentences upon all who disobey his edicts, one of the most important rights guaranteed by the Constitution will have been submerged. The country has already seen how one drastic measure leads to others still more drastic. If dictatorial practice is essential to curb the output of cotton, it may be extended to wheat, corn, cattle, milk—all industry and business. Carried to its logical conclusion, this measure means virtual Government ownership of land and management of farms. As Senator Bailey said: "If this bill shall go through, we may take from the people any right they have."

The tragic thing is that Congress refuses to face the challenge thus raised. Its interest appears to be confined to the immediate problem of raising cotton prices. Fundamental human rights are forgotten. With dereliction seldom equaled in Congress, American liberties are being surrendered for a mess of pottage.

The Deeper Issue.

President Roosevelt's indorsement of the Fletcher-Rayburn bill is admirable so far as it seeks to rally sentiment to end speculative abuses on the security and commodity exchanges. There is some natural disagreement on the best means to accomplish this end. But it is not this aspect of the President's letter; it is his failure to appreciate what gives the protests real substance, which arouses concern.

Undoubtedly there has developed, as Mr. Roosevelt asserts, a "definite and highly organized drive" against this regulatory legislation, in spite of some modifications made in the original draft. Those who see their business menaced by far-reaching Federal interference are certainly entitled to protest, even in cases where such protest is purely selfish and anti-social. But to suggest that the opposition is limited to those who profit from undesirable speculative procedure is to miss the whole point. The important part of that opposition is concentrated not on the desirable aspects of the proposed legislation, but on its unadvertised underlying intent.

That underlying intent, also discernible in the securities act, appears to be a highly intelligent attempt to break down the present corporate structure of industry. Certain of its advocates have called the policy one of "pulverization." In full operation it would so impede the financing and operation of large-scale industry as to force its disintegration into smaller, more competitive units.

The social desirability of such a policy, while an interesting subject for consideration, is not the issue before the public. In fact, it is being very carefully kept out of the limelight of open discussion, partly by the device of labeling as partisan or self-interested those who see what is involved. It is realized that not one person in a thousand is familiar with the actual terms of the controversial legislation. The measures are given a general advertisement as socially desirable, which is in part the case. They are officially commended in a way which appeals to the natural bitterness of all who have good cause to feel resentment against the operation of the security markets. But of the revolutionary changes which these laws would create in our economic structure little or nothing is said—at least publicly.

That, of course, is the fact which makes the charges brought by Dr. William Wirt of more than passing or merely sensational interest. Undoubtedly it is nonsense to draw the implication that insidious Communistic penetration is at work in Washington. But a "policy of pulverization" need not be less revolutionary in its effects because it is designed to achieve displacement of the existing order by peaceful rather than violent means. And certainly there is nothing surprising in the fact of a growing resentment on the part of those whom the program seems designed to pulverize.

This resentment will not and should not be eliminated by pretense that all of the present administrative program is related to the measures undertaken to secure economic recovery. It is far too clear that recovery is in some cases completely subordinated to an ideal of far-reaching social change which is more likely to intensify than to relieve the depression. That is where the President's latest public statement falls short. It tends to lend the great weight of his personal authority to the belief that nothing more than a highly desirable regulation of the security markets is at issue. Much more than that is actually at stake.

The objection of this newspaper is to the failure of the Administration to state clearly and courageously the full implications of certain measures which are being resolutely pushed through to law. In many cases the advertised objectives of this legislation are highly desirable. But underlying the stated purpose may be seen an evident intention to press enactment without admission of ulterior aims. It is not thus that the ends of Democracy are served.

A Courageous Reversal.

More than a month has been required to convert the Administration to a reversal of the air-mail policy so unceremoniously adopted by Postmaster General Farley. It appears, however, that the Administration is now ready to return the air-mail service to private operators as soon as temporary contracts can be let. The circular swing to this position has been slow, but the President deserves credit for his present effort to repair the damage which has been done to the air-mail system.

Controversy over the ultimate form of air-mail legislation appears to be one reason for the reversal of policy. Cabinet members and congressional leaders have discovered that development of a sound policy of subsidizing aviation is not a simple matter. The question ought to be considered at length. In the meantime the air mail must be placed once more in the hands of private operators to avoid further disintegration and needless loss of life.

It seems to be a fair assumption that former contractors will be permitted to carry mail again since they are best prepared to take over the service immediately. Temporary contracts may be granted to them without in any way condoning fraud or collusion. It remains, however, for the Administration to work out a plan of presenting the charges that have been made to a competent tribunal, so that the entire squabble may be cleared up without prejudice to any honest carrier or exoneration of any that may have tried to defraud the Government.

Reaping The Whirlwind.

By an overwhelming vote the House yesterday overrode President Roosevelt's veto of the independent offices appropriation bill. The President had emphatically rebuked Congress for scuttling his economy program and yielding to untenable principles advocated by the veterans' lobby. But the House recorded its defiance of both the President and the budget with unexpected vehemence. It remains for the Senate to decide the economy issue, which has already assumed a position of vital importance in the Administration's program.

The veto message was clear, cogent and reasonable. It recognized the need for salary adjustments and invited congressional leaders to join in a compromise. It promised further efforts to make certain that no war-disabled veteran is subjected to injustice. "My disapproval of this bill," the President said, "is not based solely on the consideration of dollars and cents. There is a deeper consideration. You and I are concerned with the principles herein enunciated." The soundness of those principles on which the President took his stand is not open to question. If Congress were guided by the welfare of the Nation, instead of the political ambitions of its members, they never would have been questioned.

Yet, to a certain extent, the Administration itself is responsible for this reckless attitude toward the budget and the national credit. Having advocated lavish expenditures on many fronts, the President is not in a favorable position to demand unpopular economies of Congress. No doubt many Congressmen thought the example set by lavish Federal expenditures to date would be more impressive in the public mind than the plain words of the veto message.

Of course, the laxity of the Executive is no excuse for disregard of the National credit by Congress. The basic purpose of the check and balance system in the American form of Government is to permit one branch to avert abuses tolerated by the other. In this particular instance Congress can thwart the President only by closing its mind to sound principle and an urgent need for curtailment of expenditures.

Numerous concessions have been made to veterans by Executive order since the economy act was passed. The efforts of Congress to restore to the pension rolls 29,000 veterans whose injuries have been proved to have no connection with their war service are indefensible. Under a new order all of these cases will be reviewed by a board of appeals having instructions to resolve every reasonable doubt in favor of the veterans, and they will receive compensation pending this final settlement of their cases. Similar concessions are being made in favor of Spanish-American war veterans. There is nothing to be proud of in the vote whereby the House seeks to substitute fictitious presumptions for the facts thus ascertained as a basis on which veterans' awards shall be paid.

On the Navy Bill.

Certain misapprehensions over the true significance of the Vinson Navy bill, which President Roosevelt signed yesterday, were removed by his simultaneous statement of executive purpose. After declaring that the Administration will continue to favor reductions in naval armaments, the President made several points that are worthy of repetition.

First he reiterated the fact that the new law merely authorizes the building up of the Navy to the limits set by treaty in Washington in 1922 and in London in 1930, without appropriating any funds for the building of ships of any kind. It has been estimated that in order to construct the 65 destroyers, the 32 submarines, the 4 cruisers, and the 1,100 airplanes which the two treaties allow us, Congress would have to appropriate well over $500,000,000 during the next seven years. The Vinson bill, however, carries no authorization for the spending of this huge sum. It merely grants permission to build if the Administration and Congress give further permission to withdraw the money from the Treasury.

Having made this clear, President Roosevelt went on record as favoring continued limitation of armaments and the retention, or even reduction, of treaty limitations at the 1935 conference. In making this declaration he shows that he has not succumbed to the hysteria which sees a war around every corner. In the Vinson bill there is authority to increase the Navy's strength as if and when emergency arises. It is an admirable bargaining weapon. But the tone of the memorandum is such as to give comforting assurance that the Administration will be very loath to participate in, or to encourage, any naval race.

Recovery Suggestion.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In response to the request for suggestions to aid recovery, I respectfully offer what I believe to be a constructive and opportune suggestion.

The proportion of the earned dollar exacted from industry by Government, National, State and local, for its support is more than industry can pay and also provide the high standard of living demanded by NRA.

Let us follow the right of way of any one of the class 1 railroads. We start from the beginning line. There we find county, city, school district and other divisions of Government. The railroad pays taxes to each one. We leave one county and enter another, and many more. It is the same story of duplicated governments and taxes. The railroad pays to a bewildering number of governments within government. This tribute paying is more or less duplicated in every State through which the railroad passes; then, on top of all, Federal taxes must be paid.

The high cost of Government has contributed to the depression, which, in turn, is quite responsible for the crime wave, conservatively estimated to cost the Nation $14,000,000,000 a year.

It is of no benefit to contnue enacting savage laws to curb criminals. Let us remove the cause of crime; then law observance will become general. The money thus saved can be used to educate our children, whose education is now neglected due to the serious curtailment of the public school service; and the money saved from excessive Government can be profitably used in business and industrial enterprises. These savings, when effected, would be progress, tranquillity and prosperity.

Municipal, State and National Government is necessary, but county and district government is not. City and district government means duplication of costs. County government is expensive.

I propose constitutional means to secure inexpensive government.

County and district government should be abolished. We should have municipal, State and National Government only.

The State Legislature and all elective offices to be abolished. A small board of directors to be elected by the people at the time municipal directors are elected. The same procedure as to the appointment of chairman, who would be manager of the business of State. Candidates for the office of State director should be required to possess the highest qualifications.

Business government would be more amenable to popular will than oratorical government.

The National Congress to be abolished. Each State board to appoint, or the people elect, one director to the Federal board of directors.

The offices of Presidency and Vice Presidency might be retained, but it would be better for the National board to appoint a National manager instead.

Sales Talk.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I am a salesman. I'm broke and its my own fault. But—why should a salesman be cussed, cuffed and clubbed and have doors slammed in his face? He is not as obnoxious as Mr. Public seems to think. He's human and plods on.

The salesman works under a contract. His firm's attorney burns midnight oil trying to make said contract hard and severe, never forgetting it must always favor the firm. The salesman must make his quota, must be bonded, have a car, pay his own expenses, guarantee payment of notes and promises. Thus far, the Government has not instituted the S. S. S. (Salesmen's Salvation Society.)

Blessings on a Fool.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In these days of uncertainty and confusion, much has been said, written and printed, but very little, if anything, has been done toward a permanent National "recovery"—"discovery" would be a better term.

The experiences of individuals and nations through the ages are sufficient proof that prosperity, peace and wealth in the hands of unscrupulous, selfish and lying persons are more of a curse than a blessing. Laws were made, are still being made, for criminals, and according to the number of laws we have in this country, we are a Nation of criminals.

A good man (I mean G-O-O-D) needs no laws at the elbow of his conscience. A community of good people always has a good government. And where there is a community of selfish, lying, cheating and crooked people, there you will find depression, want, poverty and bad government.

America will never find a real peace and prosperity or even a "recovery" until she learns how to be honest. Bestow a blessing on a fool and he will receive it as a curse. America is a fool, she has had everything that the head, heart and hand could wish for.

You can't get around it! He who laughs at God is going to feel the stripes of the Almighty's rod. For a recovery in discovery.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It would be hard to say enough in praise of the "new" Washington Post. I have read this newspaper for the past ten years, and can therefore appreciate the vast improvement which has taken place under the present management. Every day I devote at least two hours to reading my copy and consider that the time could not be better spent.

The letter department, in which you grant your readers the opportunity to air their grievances, is particularly interesting. For J. C. Ransom, who wrote about dogs, my sympathy is heartfelt. In my neighborhood I have often seen the owner of a dog stand looking on with child-like satisfaction while his pet raged around my house and on to my property, bent on attacking my cats, which like to sit on my porch. It is this type of dog, entirely uncontrolled and left to its own savage instincts, which arouses antagonism against the whole species

Misjudging Missouri.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The article about Missouri and the letter from Mrs. Rogers approving the article were both read with a great deal of interest. I have been looking daily to see if several glaring inaccuracies would be mentioned, but so far have seen no reference to them. Hence, this letter.

Missouri has always been intensely Southern in its sympathies, having been settled by Virginians, Kentuckians and Tennesseeans. Missouri joined the Confederacy and Kentucky did not; yet one always hears of Missouri spoken of as Northern or Western and Kentucky as the heart of the South.

It is St. Louis and not Kansas City that is the great railroad center—32 lines, I think, center there. This is not written in a spirit of criticism, but only in the interest of correct testimony being handed down to posterity.

On Taking Life Easy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Americans do not know how to relax or rest, and continually are keyed up to the highest pitch and physical state. This is the reason many break down early in life. I am of Welsh ancestry (but American born) and notice when I visit Welsh relatives just over from Europe they all take life easier and have time for rest, for music and recreation, and seem to worry less than native-born people. We Americans spend too much time in trying to make a living; we do not make a life in the true sense of the word.

Too Much War News Comes From China

That the news cabled abroad about conditions in China lays too much stress upon war and rumors of war, and ignores the forces which are operating toward creating a new China, is the view of Mr. Julean Arnold, U. S. Commercial Attache to the American Legation, Peiping. He points out, according to Chinese information service, that it is very difficult to present to the intelligent reader a balanced picture of present-day China because the more unfavorable aspects of the situation have been overemphasized and entirely too little is known about the constructive developments going on in various parts of the country.

Mr. Arnold is in the fortunate position of being able to travel about China and see for himself what is going on—thus he notes that while the press correspondents keep a close eye on the doings of certain Szechuen warlords, nothing is written for publication abroad about the opening of a 300-mile motor road between Chungking and Chengtu, in the very same province where a "war" is being followed so closely. The news about fighting makes much more exciting reading than the national economic council's plan for building 15,000 miles of roads, but the gradual disappearance of the camel, mule, donkey, wheel-barrow, and sedan chair with the appearance of the motor bus, truck, and car is, after all, not entirely without interest.

Again, in the matter of town-planning, Mr. Arnold points out that in China today there are more cities under reconstruction that ever before in any other country in all of the world's history. The widening of city streets is encouraging other civic improvements—installation of waterworks, modern lighting systems, telephones, parks, playgrounds and public health facilities. Ten years ago Amoy was one of the dirtiest, most congested and most sordid cities in China, but today is completely transformed with wide, well-paved, well-drained and well-lighted streets. Pure water is available, brought from reservoirs in the distant hills. There are a beautiful park, athletic fields, playground and recreation facilities and roads radiate in all directions with regular motor bus services. Scores of other cities in South China have during the last few years undergone similar transformation.

Mr. Arnold emphasises the fact that it is only by traveling through the interior that one is able to secure the information essential to a proper appreciation of China in reconstruction and he mentions that recipients of his official review of Chinese trade and industry for 1932 wrote back to him expressing surprise that so much constructive work is going on in China, as evidenced by the material embraced in his report. And in regard to the transformation which is quietly but steadily going on, Mr. Arnold says that after seeing the sterling qualities of the hard-working, industrious people who live in the lower Yangtse region "one could only conclude from observation that under proper leadership China might easily become one of the more advanced and more powerful nations."

The Post Impressionist

The Lady Of The House.

Postoffice, Wednesday.

The Rothschild legend has entered upon its second blooming. In Berlin there is demand for a new edition of Ignatz Balla's book on the great international banking-house, book first published 20 years ago. Paris rereads Matrac's 1909 volume. Washington bookshops display again the Lunn translation of Count Corti's history. All this is part of a phenomenon started by George Arliss' screen impersonation of the family's founder.

To our captious mind it appears that while these works do not say too much about the first great Rothschild, they say too little concerning Gudula Schnapper.

Handsome Christina of Sweden made Europe gasp for a few years, but Gudula Schnapper married a man who did almost as much as Wellington to overthrow Napoleon. Amschel Rothschild Sr., laid the foundations of the Rothschild fortune; but Gudula Schnapper Rothschild bore and brought up those sons who built its walls and reared its towers.

* * * *

"Your Imperial Majesty looks worried," said she to the Emperor of Austria.

"Madam," replied that ruler, "what monarch would not look worried when his former allies are preparing war against him?"

"Poof!" laughed Frau Rothschild. "If that is all that is bothering you, take your ease. I shall speak to my boys about it, and they won't let those fellows fight!"

And she did speak to them. And they did, by withholding the loans requested of them, prevent war.

* * * *

In Frankfort-on-Main, Amschel Rothschild was a poor young man when he fell in love with Gudula. He had moved from the little house with the red shield above its door, which gave the name of Rothschild, to the family that had inhabited it for generations. But he was renting a house scarcely more pretentious. Thither he brought his bride, in 1770, the 17-year-old daughter of tradesman Wolf Solomon Schnapper.

We are told by these current authorities that she had been meticulously educated "in all the domestic virtues." She was "simple and modest and exceedingly industrious."

No doubt. But, according to what the Post Impressionist can dig from older documents, she was not the smiling cipher that the modern chroniclers would have us believe. Rather was she a power between the walls of her home and the influence she there exerted was carried thence wherever her men-folk went about the world. She impressed her "simplicity and modesty" upon all her family—and was not too modest in her methods of impress, either.

* * * *

Gudula was opposed to all display. When fortune smiled upon the family of 12, her husband moved them to a somewhat better residence, "Zum Grunen Schild;" but this was the limit of her domiciliary tolerance.

"This is good enough," said she; "we will stay."

"Everything in the house was very narrow," says Corti, "and each particle of space was turned to account. A creaking wooden staircase, underneath which cupboards had been built, led to the upper floor and to the little 'green room' of Gudula, so called because the modest furniture in it was upholstered in green." Under a glass top on the table was kept the wife's bridal wreath.

The parents had a small bedroom on the ground floor; their children shared another. The kitchen was barely 5 feet by 12. At the rear, overlooking a narrow courtyard, was one small room more: the Rothschilds' first bank.

* * * *

In such quarters, the wife of Amschel brought up her children. There she kept the family together until its financial interests covered the continent and drew one son to Prague, another to Paris, a third to London. They remained simple in their personal tastes, those boys, but had to live, as times changed, in establishments more on a level with their wealth. Not so their mother and, under her influence, their father. Amschel Rothschild and his wife would fare forth to dine at palaces, but they would return here. When Ministers of Finance and the private representatives of monarchs wanted to deal with the head of the firm of Rothschild, they had either to send to the "Grunen Schild" or, not infrequently, go there.

There, as wife and widow, Gudula lived until the day of her death in 1849.

* * * *

We are not pretending that she played a part in the business of the firm, but there is evidence that other people thought she did. In the current English slang, "they got no change out of Frau Rothschild."

Amschel had befriended the Landgrave of Hesse. When that prince fled before the French, a good deal of his money was supposed to be hidden somewhere about "Grunen Schild." Napoleon ordered his officers to secure it and they subjected Gudula to a severe cross-examination. Their questions were many; her answer was one:

"I know nothing of the business affairs of my husband or his sons!"

Napoleon never got any of the landgrave's money from the Rothschilds.

* * * *

Did she enjoy her life? Certainly she clung to it. At the age of 96 she lay dying in the house where she had lived so long. Her sons, for she had long survived her husband, summoned the best physicians in Europe to her simple bedside.

"Can't you cure me?" she inquired.

"Alas, madam," said their leader, "we can not make you young again."

"I do not," she smiled, "ask you to make me young again; I ask you only to make me able to grow old a little longer."

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

THE burning question the past two or three days in the press rooms, the press galleries and the Press Club, in other words, among the working newspapermen, is how Dr. Wirt, the Indiana school superintendent, and his lurid charges, came to be such a big story. It is being prominently played by all of the metropolitan newspapers, by newspapers of all shades of opinion and even by those who are ridiculing the charges on their editorial pages. Why?

BARGERON.

In all likelihood had the educator made his charges in a "Letter to the Editor" they would have excited little if any comment. Indeed, I have read many such letters since the New Deal came in. His letter, however, was read before a Congressional committee. Bing! It hits the front pages, and if those with which I come in contact are any criteria, it is one of the most talked about stories in the country today.

• • • •

As to why this should be so I can't say, any more than I can explain why Charlie Dawes came suddenly to be a "great" man when he shouted "Hell and Maria" before a Congressional committee. Things just happen that way.

Undoubtedly what helped in the development of this story was that the Democrats gave the impression of wanting to suppress it. And their handling of it now doesn't indicated to diminish it in the slightest. The more they talk of wanting the Department of Justice to investigate it the more our curiosity is likely to be aroused.

The spontaneity with which it caught on, however, I expect may be ascribed to Col. Lindbergh's flight to Paris. Transatlantic flights had been made before. Yet this one gripped us. For a year or so afterwards millions of youngsters were flying toy planes and the aviation industry, generally, went forward in great strides. The Lindy flight struck a popular chord. I think that is what the Wirt charges have done. Doubts must have arisen all over the country by now as to what is happening here.

• • • •

As to how the good doctor will fare, if and when he comes here, remains to be seen. Already certain of his charges—that a "plot" to overthrow the Government exists, that to this end the plotters want to hold up recovery, &c.—have put him in for the ridicule that he heard this at some cocktail party here.

The suspicion strongly persists with me that the doctor threw these in as propaganda to get a hearing for his more substantial charges. It seems quite legitimate, indeed necessary, in these days when we are ruled by propaganda. One must have a sensational utterance if one expects to get an audience at all.

In this instance, though, if the doctor isn't careful, the sensational portion of his say may prove his undoing. Obviously, the play of the Democrats is to keep attention focused on this with the view of laughing him entirely off.

• • • •

That there is a strong left-wing element around Mr. Roosevelt, I am surprised that anyone would doubt after these many months. Indeed, for a long time we have been referring to the right and left wings of his Administration with no thought of Congress at all. Mr. Roosevelt's best friends have accepted this characterization and their defense has always been that he could be depended upon to keep a "proper" balance. I have never heard any of the left wing plotting his overthrow. I have heard their doubts as to how far he would go with them and seen evidence of their determination to push him along.

Why, our discussion in Washington for months has turned on the question of whether, on a particular day, Mr. Roosevelt is swinging, or has swung, to the left or to the right. The Conservatives, for example, gleefully hailed his statement in the automobile controversy as a swing to the right.

The fact that in swinging either to the left or to the right, or back and forth as has been the case, we have gone far from legislative government to a government by decree seems not to disturb us at all.

If this fact alone comes out clearly from the Wirt melee I, for one, will vote the gentleman a medal of some kind.

The bear said: "He's Kerensky an' we thought you oughter know."
An' they cried for borsch and vodka with a strangely wicked shout—
An' the Gobble-uns'll git you ef you don't watch out!

An' Dr. William Wirt says when the blaze is blue,
An' the lamp wick sputters, an' the wind goes woo-oo!
An' the old established order looks a greenish gray,
An' it's all done by initials through the CWA,
You better watch the Brain Trust and the Democrats before
They take away your country an' it ain't there any more;
So start investigatin' for to see what it's about—
Or the Gobble-uns'll git you ef you don't watch out!

Dr. Nevil M. Hopkins, N. Y. U. engineer, has invented a device, which will enable the radio audience to answer "Yes" or "No" to any radio program. The "Yes" seems a little superfluous.

FREDERICK HALE, Senator from Maine. Born in Detroit 59 years ago, but one of the Hales of Maine who for generations have been prominent in affairs of the State and Nation. After he had been to Lawrenceville, Groton, and Harvard, the family flair for public life took him to the Maine House of Representatives in 1904. Maine's Republican National committeeman from 1912 to 1918. A colonel on the Governor's staff. A lawyer, when not busy with politics. Elected to the Senate in 1916. One of the Republican stalwarts, but sometimes insurgent in support of the Navy. Rarely oratorical, except in pleas for the Navy, and hence one of the less conspicuous of toga-wearers. Bachelor. A regular in party councils, though not a leader. A popular diner-out.

Gray's "Elegy."

I suppose there is no more popular poem in English literature than Gray's "Elegy." One of the most remarkable things about it is that Thomas Gray wrote it. Ordinarily one would have thought that he would be the last man to show such tender and sincere sympathy with the poor. Of all the British poets, he was the best scholar; and of all writers, he had the most fastidious taste. Yet it was he, and no one else, who wrote a poem that the most ignorant and the most learned, the youngest and the oldest, the least and the most traveled, take delight in reading and quoting. In English churches the wealthy and the aristocratic are buried inside the edifice; the poor are buried in the churchyard. Hence the title—"Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard." The original title had the word "wrote" instead of "written."

Gray was a Cambridge man and spent his whole life at the university; he abhorred publicity and could not bear to attract attention. He refused with scorn the offer of the Poet-Laureateship. He produced very little poetry, and laughed at the extremely small amount of what the publisher called his "poetical works." He said it sounded conceited to have the name Gray on the title page, as if he were somebody; so he insisted on having it printed Mr. Gray. He was never married; he was very shy; he was a recluse. But he had the most delicate observation, and his published "Letters" are among the best ever written. They are full of excellent humor, the humor of a quiet observer.

No one knows how long it took him to write the "Elegy." It was first published in 1751, and he had been working on it for a number of years. He apparently did not wish to publish it at all; but, hearing that a magazine had got hold of a copy and was about to print it piratically, he hurriedly prepared it for the press. It was instantly successful. The whole country became excited about it, and innumerable editions, imitations and parodies appeared within a few years. There has never been a moment since its publication when it has suffered any decline in popularity.

Those who go to England this summer must see the churchyard at Stoke Poges, not far from Windsor, which is the scene described in the poem, and which has remained unaltered for 200 years. There is the very yew tree guarding the graves of the poor. I first visited this place in a calm September twilight, and the peace of God seemed to be over it. I fell upon my knees.

There are two stanzas which Gray wrote to be included in the "Elegy," and which he canceled:

Hark how the sacred calm, that broods around,
Bids every fierce, tumultuous passion cease;
In still, small accents whispering from the ground,
A grateful earnest of eternal peace.

There scattered oft, the earliest of the year,
By hands unseen are showers of violets found;
The redbreast loves to build an warble there,
And little footsteps lightly print the ground.

Lowell said that Gray might draw his pen through that stanza, but he could not obliterate it from the memory of men.

One of the most beautiful things he wrote is on his mother's tombstone: "She was the mother of many children, only one of whom had the misfortune to survive her."

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

IT can't be news that the feminists have won the field. But we won't realize the vast acreage of that field until we find, duly set down in a book of advice on the wage-earning opportunities of women, the mental temperament necessary for a woman mayor, the preparatory training most valuable to a woman policeman, and the proper home reading for a woman deep-sea diver. As far as I can see, there's no pinnacle left for the sovereign male but fidgeting in a wing collar at the altar.

THEO. HALL.

In "Careers for Women" (Houghton-Mifflin, $3), edited by Catherine Filene, 150 leading professional women give the requirements and opportunities of as many kinds of work. It's all worked out very systematically—there are 24 large fields, from agriculture to transportation; each of these is subdivided into definite jobs, such as taxidermists or radio librarian, and each article on one of these tells in sequence of the scope of the work, qualifications for success, training, supply and demand, age limits, financial reward, advantages and disadvantages and suggested reading. There's nothing else quite so helpful for the woman who is "just looking, thank you," at careers. When she decides, as most of the articles frankly point out, the work begins.

• • • •

That frankness is very refreshing. Says Elizabeth Daingerfield, who reared Man o' War on her Kentucky stock farm: "Managing a stock farm means as complete effacement of every other interest in life as a nun's in her convent." Ann de Priest, an air hostess, writes that the Eastern Air Transport had more than 15,000 applications for the twelve positions on their line. Katherine C. Hepburn describes at length the opportunities of the Foreign Service, and then is able to name every woman in the field. There have been six; now there are only two. Not a line in the book will deceive the anxious girl graduate as to the real state of affairs.

For these women know exactly what they are talking about. They are all practitioners; most of them are conspicuously successful. Mrs. William Brown Meloney, editor of the Sunday Magazine of the New York Herald Tribune, writes of newspaper work. Helena Rubenstein writes of the beauty culturist. Margaret Bourke-White gives a lively little sketch of the trials and joys of an industrial photographer. Frances Perkins discourses on the factory inspector. Florence E. Allen, long famous as a judge in Ohio and recently appointed to the Circuit Court of Appeals, does the same for the prosecuting attorney. For the explorer there is Blair Niles; for the tea room manager, Alice Foote McDougal; for the playwright, Rachel Crothers; for the travel bureau director, Clara E. Laughlin. That should give you a rough idea.

What I liked best were Margaret Fishback's candid words about the advertising copy-writer. She begins: "Advertising is no picnic." She says the pay is "fantastically inconsistent." One of the worst disadvantages is "the occasional weak moment when one suffers rising gorge from the conviction that the whole business is parasitic and unattractive because it means forever attempting to persuade people to buy things that they may neither want nor need." But it's worth it. On the whole, "advertising is stimulating and exciting, swift and alive, uneven and unexpected." I very strongly suspect that the first four of those qualities came from Miss Fishback herself. Her handiwork in Macy's advertising, her little book of verse, "Out of My Head," and this article itself, are enough to rest the case on.

In the Margin.

President Roosevelt has delivered to his publishers the corrected page proof of his new book, "On Our Way," which John Day will publish April 12. While he was writing the first draft of the manuscript, the President adopted the five-day week which he has set for American industry, staying away from the Executive offices and denying himself to callers in his White House study. In the leisure time thus taken from affairs of state he completed the manuscript ahead of the time scheduled.

Archibald Rutledge has been named poet laureate of South Carolina by Gov. Blackwood, who was empowered recently by the General Assembly to appoint some distinguished man of letters to the office. Mr. Rutledge was selected for his eight books of poems and his book of essays, "Peace in the Heart," which Doubleday-Doran published several years ago.

Just as Vicki Baum took a job as chambermaid in one of the big Berlin hotels to collect material for her "Grand Hotel," so Phyllis Bottome betook herself to one of the great mental hospitals before writing "Private Worlds," just published by Houghton-Mifflin. Whereas the doctors thought she was studying the patients she, on the other hand, was studying the doctors themselves.

"I came to write the book," she says, "because an alienist friend of mine once said to me, 'You have no idea how like the sane mind is to the insane. It is really a question of controls.'"

No NRA Hours in New Deal

Pace That Kills Maintained by Administration From President on Down, Despite Short Hours Sought for Industry.

By Raymond Clapper.

By an ironical contradiction this Administration, which has made it a major policy to reduce hours of labor throughout private life, has imposed upon itself a man-killing pace from which even the President can escape only by superhuman effort.

The hectic day Mr. Roosevelt put in before he could leave last night on his Florida fishing trip included the turmoil of the Congressional fight over his veteran-pay bill veto, a conference with railroad labor leaders over their wage dispute, and a meeting with Postoffice officials to discuss temporary bids for restoration of air mail to private lines.

This high-pressure activity is going on every day and night, not only in the White House, but throughout the Government.

Harold L. Ickes is Secretary of Interior, a vast department with 20,000 employes. He also is Public Works Administrator, a job which involves a multitude of decisions concerning expenditure of $3,300,000,000 in projects which require letting of countless contracts.

Furthermore, he is administrator of the oil code, and must make daily decisions concerning one of the most technical, complicated, and strife-torn of all industries. Any one of those three jobs is enough for the huskiest person.

Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau, working without an undersecretary, must make decisions constantly regarding the handling of the vast stablization funds, the floating of Government issues, tax matters in addition to supervising erection of public buildings. Some of the matters involved, such as the handling of the stabilization fund are so secret that Mr. Morgenthau does not feel safe in having them in writing. Certain facts about Treasury matters are not to be found on paper anywhere in the department. Only Morgenthau and the President know them.

When Postmaster General Farley is in town he may be found at his office until 8 or 9 o'clock any night. He does most of his work after the callers who infest his office all day have gone to dinner.

Gen. Johnson considers he has had a good night's sleep if he gets four hours. The pace at NRA—the heart of the Government drive to reduce hours for industry—is so heavy that clerical employes have rebelled. Stenographers have begun to "walk out" at 5 p. m. Others less bold have stayed on working until long after dinner time.

The Load Is Growing.

And the load is growing, not diminishing. It is growing so rapidly that the time is fast approaching when the limit of human endurance will be reached. Already it is a serious question within the Government because under the vast discretionary powers which have been lodged with the executive branch, decisions of vital importance must be made constantly and the danger of mistakes grows as the men who must make decisions grow fatigued and nervous.

Under the present regime warped judgment due to fatigue can become a serious matter to millions of people. Many persons here feel that the Administration would have handled the air-mail matter more effectively if there had been less haste.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration in its early stages rushed into a series of milk agreements in various parts of the country which had to be scrapped because of fundamental weaknesses.

Normally it might be expected that in time the new powers acquired under the recovery program would be carried on through routine procedure once the methods were worked out. But conditions change so rapidly that constant revision is necessary. Adding of additional basic commodities to the agricultural adjustment act add sharply to the general load. Only men of the strongest physique and of the most intense capacity for steady application are able to keep their heads above the flood.

"It may be all right while we have energetic and conscientious people like yourself doing this superhuman work," one Cabinet officer was told recently. "But what would happen if we went back to the normal type of man like all of your predecessors for years back?"

"The answer is to keep us in office," the Cabinet officer replied.

Naval Men to Hear Talk on Parasites

Dr. Hall, Federal Expert, to Speak Monday.

The Nation-wide campaign against parasitic diseases will be discussed by Dr. Maurice C. Hall, chief of the division of zoology, Bureau of Animal Industry, Department of Agriculture, Monday at the seventh monthly meeting of regular, retired and reserve officers of the Navy at the Naval School.

Officers from the District, Annapolis and Quantico will attend, and members of the medical department of the Army, the Public Health Service, the Veterans' Administration and civilian physicians have been invited.

Medical Director George W. McCoy, of the United States Public Health Service, previously scheduled to speak, will be out of the city.

Veterans Warned To Spurn March

Local Commander Fears Result of Publicity.

Declaring that the publicity would be to their eventual detriment, Oscar G. Jones, commander of Victory Post No. 4, Department of the American Legion, yesterday urged veterans to shun any march on Washington.

Jones stated such a movement is being sponsored by radical organizations. A survey of the Capital, Jones added, has convinced him that anyone who comes here will find himself "in privation and distress."

"This country," asserted Jones, "needs the loyal support of the veterans today as much as it did back in 1918, and if such support is given our veterans, the President will take care of them."

He Encourages Planting if He Makes Machines to Harvest

By Robert Quillen

History tells you that France lost the Franco-Prussian War and paid dearly to rid her soil of enemy troops.

But it doesn't tell you that France furnished the money used by Krupp to make the guns that killed French soldiers.

There are other things, equally strange, that war's historians never mention.

When Japan and Russia fought, England was an ally of Japan. Yet England provided the guns used by Russia to kill Japanese.

That was odd, you will agree, but greater oddities occurred during the World War.

Men were dying by the millions to save their fatherland—struggling and suffering to the last agonized gasp to overcome the enemy.

Yet England was furnishing Germany, through Sweden, the nickel and other materials needed to kill English soldiers.

France was furnishing Germany, through Switzerland, the copper and rubber and other things needed in making war materials to kill French soldiers.

And Germany, through Switzerland, was furnishing France with magnetos and iron used in killing German soldiers.

In one region captured by Germany were mines and blast furnaces that supplied three-fourths of the steel used to carry on the war.

A French army was close to that region. It might have bombed the furnaces and wrecked the mines, but it didn't.

And the Germans made no effort to bomb the region that provided steel for the French war machine.

Consider one more oddity. Powerful French newspapers denounce Hitler and kindle wrath against him. Yet the owners of these newspapers financed his rise to power.

Why? Because these newspaper owners also own munitions plants and Hitler is a good tool for the making of another war.

That tells the story. A few gentlemen, seldom mentioned in print, control the world's hundreds of munitions plants. They also control banks and make or break politicians.

And these gentlemen care little who wins a war. Their concern is to get the war started, and prolong it, for each organized butchery adds millions to their vast fortunes.

Two Damage Suits Seek $30,000 Total

Two suits, filed in District Supreme Court yesterday, asked $30,000 in damages from the Lincoln Park Bakery, the National Delivery Association and Frank L. Rochat.

In one suit, Frank Swailes asked damages of $20,000 from the bakery because of an accident at South Capitol and G streets. In the other, the association and Rochat were named defendants in an action brought by Frederick D. Barbour, who was injured by a truck near the University of Maryland last summer.

Stolen Bond Payment Bill Is Also Vetoed

Second Act Killed by President; Objects to Interest Clause.

(Associated Press.)

President Roosevelt yesterday vetoed his second bill, an act directing the Secretary of the Treasury to redeem a $1,000 liberty bond alleged to have been stolen from Joanna A. Sheehan, of Haverhill, Mass.

In his veto message to the House, Mr. Roosevelt said the bill "is objectionable since it provides for the payment of interest on the bond."

"Paid interest due bonds are not now assorted and recorded by serial numbers and obviously the coupons which were attached when the bond was lost may have been paid, or may be paid in the future, and the Treasury Department would not be in a position to know of such payment, so that a bond of indemnity would afford no protection to the United States so far as these coupons are concerned.

The bond was issued May 9, 1918, and matured September 15, 1928.

The bill said the bond with interest coupons attached was "alleged to have been lost, stolen, or destroyed."

Missing Sorority Girl Sought in New York

Wide Taste

Movie Machine to Canned Tomatoes in Cache.

Because he was a peddler by trade, police say that Raymond Blader, 21, of the 2100 block of First street northwest—held on five charges of robbery—instinctively went in for a wide variety of loot.

An inventory o' the cache of stolen merchandise discovered under a barn floor near Conicville, Va., which police say was left by Bladen, including mixing bowls, flash lights and batteries, pen knives, shaving brushes, banners, scissors, air rifles, talking machines, roller skate wheels, a motion picture machine, screw drivers, wrenches, pliers, paint brushes, and three cases of canned tomatoes.

Sheriff Luther G. Sheetz, of Harrisonburg, Va., was directed to the place by Washington police who obtained the information from Baden, formerly a visitor in the conicville section.

Noted Harvard Doctor Speaks Here Tonight

Annual Kober Lecture at Georgetown to Be Given by Dr. Cannon.

Dr. Walter Bradford Cannon, eminent physiologist of the Harvard Medical School, will give the Kober lecture for 1934 at Georgetown University tonight.

Under terms of the George M. Kober Foundation, an outstanding physician is chosen to deliver a lecture March 28 each year to commemorate the birthday of the late Dr. George M. Kober, of Washington, formerly dean of medicine at Georgetown. Dr. Cannon was chosen by the Association of American Physicians.

Tonight's lecture in Gaston Hall will be attended by many physicians, including members of the three bodies which alternate each year in making the Kober awards. They are the Association of American Physicians, the Association of American Surgeons and the Medical Society of the District of Columbia. Dr. Cannon's subject will be "The Story of the Development of Our Ideas of Chemical Mediation of Nerve Impulses."

Last year the lecturer was Dr. Rolla E. Dyer of the National Institute of Health and famous for his researches in typhus and Rocky Mountain spotted fever.

The Kober Medalist for 1934 also will be announced at tonight's program. This is awarded for outstanding achievement.

Swanky, Sans Swan 'Rolls Them Bones'

Dog's Back and Wiser, His Generosity Wavering.

Not so long ago the voluntary self-sacrifice of Swanky, a wire-haired terrier, resulted in the Community Chest being $1 wealthier, the "buck" going to purchase bones for less-fortunate "pooches."

Swanky, at the instigation of his mistress, Miss Helen O'Connor, of 3313 Cleveland avenue northwest, cut down on his daily allowance of kennel rations and the cash saving thereby went to the Animal Rescue League.

But ten days ago Swanky disappeared. The Rescue League and newspaper advertising were utilized to locate the canine philanthropist.

Yesterday a Conduit road resident recognized Swanky, far from being swank. When he was returned to Miss O'Connor last night the dog looked as though he hadn't eaten during his entire ten-day absence.

"Never again. It ain't so much fun when you've got to."

Ickes Indorses RFC Financing Of PWA Jobs

Loans Would Be Made on City Bonds to Stretch Available Funds.

A proposal to utilize the Reconstruction Finance Corporation as a source for Public Works Administration loans yesterday was indorsed by Secretary Ickes, works administrator.

Opening the possibility of extending the active work of the Public Works Administration far beyond its authorized working capital, the plan was evolved by President Roosevelt, Secretary Ickes, Jesse Jones, chairman of the RFC, and Harry Hopkins, relief administrator. It calls for the RFC stepping into the financing of public works by loaning funds to municipalities on their bonds instead of having PWA purchase the bonds outright.

The PWA would be called on only to furnish the customary grant of 30 per cent of the cost of materials and labor. It would retain full power of passing on the merits of a project.

New Legislation Foreseen.

"The plan would make PWA money go three times as far for non-Federal projects," Ickes said. "I am inclined to view it with considerable favor."

It was understood the plan was broached because of the declining resources of PWA, and the large "back-log" of projects which have piled up with little money to finance them. It would require legislation to authorize the hook-up of PWA and the RFC, but it was stated yesterday at RFC offices that such legislation is under consideration.

The scheme calls for handling of projects under routine PWA procedure, with that agency making examination of engineering, legal and final features. If a project is approved, the PWA would advance 30 per cent of the cost of labor and materials, and call upon the RFC to loan money on municipal bonds for the remaining funds.

Two Millions Available.

Under present procedure, the PWA in addition to supplying the 30 per cent grant, buys outright the bonds.

The RFC would have $2,000,000,000 or more available for such loans. The corporation was authorized to expend close to $5,000,000,000, with purchase of capital stock in banks and insurance companies unlimited. More than $1,000,000,000 loaned by the corporation has been repaid.

At present, when the PWA sells bonds it has purchased, the money is returned to the Federal Treasury. Under the proposed plan, the loaned money would return to the RFC.

Will H. Hays Views Future of Picture Industry Through Rose-Colored Glasses

Annual Report Cites Advance On All Fronts

By Nelson B. Bell.

There was a characteristic note of optimism in the report of President Will H. Hays, presented before the annual meeting of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., in New York yesterday.

It is Mr. Hays' contention that the sweep of motion picture progress is making the production of films based on major and minor classics of literature and the drama an integral part of the screen entertainment of the future. He reviewed the operations of the industry during the past year and presented an analysis of the trends in motion picture entertainment.

"It is a significant phase of the screen's upward progress," he declared in his report, "that rival producers should contend, as they have done this year, for priority claims to the production of one of the classic works of Charles Dickens.

Elaborate Plans.

"Among the film presentations planned or projected for the coming season are Jane Austen's 'Pride and Prejudice,' Charles Dickens' 'David Copperfield,' Oliver Goldsmith's 'She Stoops to Conquer,' Thackeray's 'Vanity Fair,' Sheridan's 'School for Scandal' and 'The Rivals,' Victor Hugo's 'Les Miserables,' Charlotte Bronte's 'Jane Eyre,' Swift's 'Gulliver's Travels,' Washington Irving's 'Rip Van Winkle,' Kipling's 'Kim' and Bulwer Lytton's 'The Last Days of Pompeii.'

"Similarly, plans are announced for the production of historical romances based on the lives of Marie Antoinette, Pasteur, Joan of Arc, Napoleon, Benvenuto Cellini and others, as well as film productions of 'Cyrano de Bergerac' and 'The Count of Monte Cristo.'"

Musicals Not Ignored.

Musicals, too, will have a new inning; there will be no lack of variety in screen entertainment.

"The comming season," according to Mr. Hays' report, "promises to revive the popularity of simple human pictures dealing with everyday life, of pictures that will reflect the great social trends of the day, pictures of vigorous satire and truly impressive drama."

Mr. Hays goes on into an extensive and penetrating description of all other branches of the cinema's progress, also, embracing such matters as "Technical Progress," "Social Progress of the Screen," "Pictures for Children," "Film Advertising," "Films Laugh 'Big, Bad Depression Wolf' Out of Public Mind," "Welcome of Constructive Criticism," "Industry's Improvement" and "Industry's Goal"—all, of course, at too great length even to be briefed here.

Mr. Hays' glasses, it is encouraging to note, are rose-colored!

If Washington fans are in the market for first-hand information of the progress being made by Joe Cronin and the Nats at their spring training camp in Biloxi, Miss., here is concrete evidence to be found in the current newsreels. The boys are shown whipping the ball gently about, taking batting practice, clowning a little and, to cap the climax—to originate a phrase—Manager Cronin explains profoundly to Prexy Clark Griffith why he thinks his team will repeat this year in the American League and Prexy Clark Griffith explains with some conviction to Manager Cronin why he thinks he's right. All very edifying.

Loew's Cherry Blossoms!

Echoing something of Deacon Hays' enthusiasm over the immediate future of the films, the local management of the Loew interests, headed by City Manager Carter Barron, makes known that their organization has reached an agreement with the Japanese Cherry Blossoms!

Contemporaneously with the National Capital's observance of the Cherry Blossom festival, the Loew houses plan to launch one of their own. The opening guns at Loew's Fox and Palace Theaters will be fired, in a manner of speaking and respectively, by George White's "Scandals," on the screen, and Thurston, the magician, on the stage and Norma Shearer, with Herbert Marshall and Robert Montgomery, in "Riptide."

Among the other screen features that are scheduled for the festival period will be found Ramon Novarro in "Laughing Boy," with Lupe Velez in support; Warner Baxter's latest, "Too Many Women;" Bing Crosby and Ethel Merman in "We're Not Dressing;" George Raft and Frances Drake, in "The Trumpet Blows," and Frederic March and Sylvia Sidney, in "Good Dame."

These screen attractions begin to bloom on Friday, March 30, but we would not be so sure about the cherry blossoms!

Three Washington motion picture exhibitors will be in attendance when the National convention of exhibitors is called to order in Los Angeles, Calif., on April 10. They will be Nat Steifel, Ed Olive and Sidney Lust, all veterans well known to the motion picture industry through long years of service as film exhibitors, film exchange managers and motion picture producers.

The Washington delegates will leave the Capital on April 4, stop over briefly in Chicago and arrive on the West Coast the morning of April 9. While in Hollywood the intimate inside workings of the major studios will be thrown open to their sophisticated gazes. The boys will be back the latter part of April.

Her Last Juliet.

Katharine Cornell evidently is having the same experience as Eva Le Gallienne in the matter of "Romeo and Juliet." Miss Le Gallienne discovered during her recent tour in a brief repertoire that "Alice in Wonderland" tremendously outdrew the Shakespeare love tragedy. One surmises that that has been the the case also in Miss Cornell's tour.

This thought is inspired by the most recent of Ray Henderson's helpful bulletins, to the effect that at the Saturday matinee, April 7, in the Shubert Theater in Cincinnati, Miss Cornell will make her last appearance as Juliet until she presents "Romeo and Juliet" at the opening of her New York season next year.

First Tour of South.

On April 9 she will begin her first tour of the South in Louisville, Ky. Her intinerary through the South and Southeast is an extensive one. She will offer Shaw's "Candida" and Besier's "The Barrets of Wimpole Street" exclusively on this tour.

Miss Cornell will appear in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island in May and June. It is probable that her long transcontinental tour will end with a week each in Newark and Brooklyn.

Her attendance record for the tour, and perhaps for all time of the spoken drama, was achieved in Des Moines, Iowa, on March 17, when 4,200 people paid $7,087 to witness her performance of "The Barretts."

Lamentations.

It is part of the perversity of something or other that this column found it impossible to attend the Frank Buck soiree Sabbath afternoon at the Willard, the premiere showing of his "Wild Cargo," at the National Press Club, that night, and the preview of Norma Shearer's "Riptide" yesterday afternoon at 2.

It is beginning to become vaguely apparent that there might be possible advantage in being born a sextet!

Youth Shot at Church Services; One Is Held

Bowling Green, Va., March 27 (Spl.).—Services at St. James' Negro Baptist Church were broken up last night by a pistol shot which sent Eddie Carter, 18, to the Mary Washington Hospital with a wounded cheek.

Purcell Monroe, 22, was in the Bowling Green Jail today under a charge of assault with a deadly weapon. He contended the shot was accidental.

State Day Observed Throughout Maryland

Baltimore, March 27 (Spl.).—Maryland Day observances were held throughout the State yesterday. Banks closed and flags flew from all public buildings.

Banks also will be closed again Friday, since Good Friday is a legal holiday in the State.

Miami Harbor Bid.

Jacksonville, Fla., March 27 (AP). The Arundel Corporation of Baltimore apparently submitted the low bid today for dredging approximately 2,563,000 cubic yards of material from Miami Harbor, offering to do the work for $1,973,510. The Government estimate for the project was $1,660,178.55.

"When Irish Eyes Are Smiling!"

A charming new camera study of the ingenuous Ruby Keeler, in private life Mrs. Al Jolson, who, with her mild Irish eyes and ingratiating smile, will soon be seen again on the musical screen in the Warner Brothers' production of "Dames," in which her prospective costar, Dick Powell, and Joan Blondell also will appear.

"THE DARK TOWER." Wee & Leventhal present the melodrama in three acts and five scenes by Alexander Woollcott and George S. Kaufman. Directed by William MacFadden. Reviewed Monday night by W. A. Whitney.

THE CAST:

Hattie .....Doro Merande
Martha Temple .....Madeline Ashton
Ben Weston .....John Leslie
Damon Wells .....Alexander Clark
Daphne Martin .....Dorothy Vernon
Jessica Wells .....Jesse Royce Landis
Barry Jones .....Paul Ballantyne
Dr. Kendall .....Willard Dashiell
Stanley Vance .....Allan Tower
A Taxi Driver .....George Splevin, jr.
Max Sarnoff .....Anton Stengel
Patsy Dowling .....Evelyn Allen
A Bellboy .....David Pardoll
William Curtis .....William MacFadden

A sparkling cocktail was served over on Lafayette Square last night as the second of the Belasco's popular-priced presentations. With a base of melodramatic farce, piquantly spiced with a deliberate and painstaking dish of murder and more genuine suspense than the customary mystery, "The Dark Tower" furnished just what the doctor ordered.

Every line living up to the capabilities of the two renowned authors, abetted with brilliant acting, the story unfolds in an Enoch Arden motif.

The supposedly late Stanley Vance is a criminal whose fabric is all wool and a yard wide and possesses the awesome power of holding his wife under some hypnotic sort of power and thus making her unwittingly do his will. As the play opens "The Dark Tower" is about to go into its New York opening, but the reappearance of the husband spoils it all.

Long Suspense.

Quite obviously the husband must be given his quietus. How it is done and how all things are smoothed out is a matter for two hours of conjecture, for it is not until two minutes before the final curtain that one's suspicions—and they are very vague, at best—are either verified or negated.

The harassed actress is played by Jessie Royce Landis, who does one of the finest bits of character work Washington has seen. Required to change—at a moment's notice—from a gay, ebullient girl into a dull, colorless somambuloid personality with little of the manifestation of red blood and vitality, it is a task—and Miss Landis is superb.

The brother in whose brain many of the ideas for the developments take form, is played by Alexander Clark, who is all the time quite believable.

"That Nasty Man."

One of the nastiest parts written into current drama is that of the husband, and Allan Tower is grand. Seldom does one feel the almost uncontrollable urge to hiss! His demise was not only a welcome relief, but one that all could heartily applaud.

As to the character of Max Sarnoff, there is still some question. The program lists Anton Stengel as the artist. We have our doubts. Perhaps when you see the play, you can guess the answer.

By Nelson B. Bell.

The season's first touch of musical splendor burst upon a brilliant capacity audience in the National Theater last night, when Mme. Maria Jeritza appeared for the first time in Washington in the title role of Rudolf Friml's "Annina."

"Annina" is marked by splendor of score, gaily and richly colored; splendor of costuming, splendor of setting and splendor of all those other elements of personality and investiture that have in the past, but not heretofore this year, combined to make operetta great.

At a hurried midnight hour it is as impossible to define all of the qualities of beauty and charm in "Annina" as it would be to undertake a detailed description of every gem in Tiffany's.

The narrative unfolded, at times with almost the musical impressiveness of grand opera, is a picturesquely romantic one that follows vaguely the same general pattern as "Bitter Sweet." That is to say, the action is initiated in 1934 by a beautiful young woman's refusal to marry the ducal bridegroom selected by her parents. On the wall of the palace in which she lives reposes the oil portrait of her great-grandmother, a simple fisher girl of the period of 1770 in Venice. Annina is urged by a rebellious old roue of a grandfather to pursue the course of her beautiful blonde ancestor and follow the dictates of her own heart.

Action Reverts.

This is done by the familiar device of a reversion to the 1770 time and events and reenacting the romance of Annina, the fisher maid, before bringing the story once more into the present with the marriage of the modern Annina to the rich young American.

The formula upon which "Annina" is builded is neither so simple nor so trite as it sounds in the cold telling. It is well founded in the romance of opera bouffe, well rounded with comedy and presented with a sumptuous pageantry that has not been matched in recent years on the light musical stage.

First Act Best.

The first act, to be sure, in the present third-week stage of the work's increasing perfection, is gayer, more exciting and more swiftly variegated than the second, but both are so prodigiously fruitful in delightful entertainment that there can be no question either of the pieces's success or its permanent place of honor among its kind.

The movement of the major theme is diversified by the interpolation of extraordinarily effective dances and a succession of choral and terpsichorean ensembles that are no less than magnificent in the superb pictorial quality of their conception and the skill of their execution.

Jeritza Triumphs.

Mme. Jeritza last night sang her role with a dramatic fervor that won not one but frequent ovations of such volume and length as appreciably to interrupt the progress of the play's development. And this after she already had on numerous occasions been unusually generous in the number of her encores.

No less enthusiastic and spontaneous were the expressions of approval of the efforts of the young dancer, Paul Haakon, and his partner, Albertina Vitak. Haakon brings back to the contemporary stage those rare gifts of choreography that have not been seen since the days when Nijinsky, Ted Shawn and one or two others of like accomplishment were at the zenith of their powers.

Not to be omitted from among the recipients of a grateful audience's vociferous acclaim were Allan Jones, tenor, who acquitted himself with high honor opposite the star and made their duets intervals of sheer joy; Jack Good and Margaret Lee, youthful lovers, touring in Venice, and dancing in syncopated fashion between spats; Andrew Tombes, chief comedian, not yet too sure of his part; Harry Mestayer, as the irrepressible grandfather, and Louise Mele, in the role of Annina's sister.

Many Notable Numbers.

Out of a score that embraces 25 pretentious numbers, perhaps the most notable are Mr. Jones' opening "Annina;" Mme. Jeritza's "Romance" and "Longing," in the first act, and "Palace of Dreams" and "It's You I Love Tonight," in the second, and the "Love," "One Tender Smile' and "My Heart is Yours" duets sung by Mme. Jeritza and Mr. Jones.

Many others in the cast score decisively with numbers a little less revelatory of distinguished musicianship than these.

These cursory notes, jotted down at the deadline hour, can convey little of the superlative excellence that reveals itself in each of "Annina's" many scenes. It can only be most insistently urged that "Annina" be seen in order that its visual and auricular beauties may be fully comprehended.

Capital Debs Give Service To Red Cross

Twenty-Eight to Receive Aids' Certificates Tomorrow.

Miss Mabel Boardman and Surgeon General Will Speak.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The gay whirl of teas, luncheons, dinners, dances and Junior League social activities has not prevented the debutantes of Washington from finding time for useful and charitable pursuits.

Those winsome young women to be seen whiling away the hours of an evening dancing, apparently with little thought beyond the latest conceit of fashion, frequently are to be found the next day as a picture of seriousness itself in their endeavors to aid the Red Cross in making life more cheerful for others.

Twenty-eight of these young ladies will prove their humanitarian interests tomorrow when they are given their certificates of graduation from the 1934 class of assistants of the District of Columbia Chapter of the American Red Cross, at exercises to be held at 4 p. m. at the chapter house on E street. Miss Mabel Boardman will make the presentations and the Surgeon General of the Army, Maj. Gen. Robert P. Patterson, will deliver an address.

Following the graduation, the staff assistance corps will give a tea in honor of the new members, who are Miss Alexandria Murray Bacon, Miss Laura Katherine Field Cheatham, Miss Evelyn Chase, Mrs. John Chamberlain, jr., Miss Mary Bowie Clagett, Miss Olga B. Dame, Miss Deborah Dows, Miss Dorothy Graham, Miss Alma Knox Duvall, Miss Helen M. Eaton, Miss Margaret Key English, Miss Mildred Reed English, Miss Anne Livingston Eustis, Miss Alice Marie Fleming, Miss Lucie Van Der Veer Friedell, Miss Elizabeth D. Gregg, Miss Marianne Felipa Hilgard, Miss Frances Richards Hodges, Miss Gertrude Laughlin, Miss Mary Louise March, Miss Mary McDowell, Miss Brownlee McKee, Miss Katherine Edmonston Pearson, Miss Sarah Wadhams Pearson, Miss Jane Esther Platt, Mrs. Landra Beach Platt, Miss Carlina Sheridan, Miss Dorothea Hamilton Sowers, Mrs. Edward Smith, Miss Dorthy Quincey Tirrell and Miss Ordway Whitford.

Mrs. McLean Plans Easter Breakfast

Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean has issued invitations for a breakfast on Easter Sunday morning at her suburban home, Friendship.

The McLean Sunday breakfasts, starting usually on Easter and continuing until the late spring, have for many years been among the most enjoyable entertainments of Capital society. Several hundred guests gather in the charming old residence, which many years ago was a monastery, and after greeting their hostess proceed to the dining room and inclosed verandas where small tables, decked with spring flowers, are set.

Diplomats, officials, and members of smart residential circles are among the guests, and following the breakfast, the old gardens of the estate offer charming walks for groups who linger until early afternoon.

Garden Society Accords Honor To Mrs. Roper

Secretary's Wife Is Guest at Tea of Capital Association.

With the turn of the season bringing spring blossoms to mind again, Washington society has renewed its admiration for the genius displayed by Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, in arranging flower gardens.

Her Southern home was surrounded by spacious grounds every inch of which was carefully planned, and planted. The garden at her Washington home, "Sunnyside," is recognized as one of the loveliest in the Capital.

So it was quite appropriate that she was the guest of honor at a tea given yesterday by the National Capital Division of the Woman's National Farm and Garden Association.

The National Woman's Country Club, where the tea was given, was decorated with spring flowers.

Mrs. Roper, an honorary member of the division, was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Otto L. Veerhoff, president of the division.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

The Hollywood influence has gone to our heads. Look at the new line of hats in a downtown store if you don't believe it.

Mr. James Hopkins, who is to moviedom what Lilly Dache is to New York's "400," has consented to his models being shown to others than his own retail customers. A Washington store has bought the exclusive rights to these hats here, and has them on special display in its millinery department.

One of them known as "Shim Sham" is a white affair trimmed with fringe. This was designed for Minna Gombell; she will wear it in her forthcoming picture, "Marrying Widows."

Another, called "Hole in the Wall," is a gray straw cloth tricorne with a navy belting trim, which will accentuate Diana Wynyard's charm in "The Road to Dover."

A devastating black taffeta cocktail hat called "Side Car" was designed especially for Katherine de Mille, daughter of the famous producer, to wear in "Death Takes a Holiday."

Crushed Gardenias.

Bowls of fragrant gardenias on the glass counter of an F street store suggested to the shopper that such glory must have a special significance. Inquiry revealed a perfume made directly from crushed gardenias and having the pure unadulterated fragrance of the flower was on sale.

Little pocket bottles are priced at 50 cents. One drop of the perfume is equivalent to the scent of one flower.

• • • •

Canapes From Sea Shells.

Shell shaped pottery hors d'oeuvre dishes on display in a Connecticut avenue shop have to be seen to be appreciated.

They're the delicate color of old ivory, and molded to resemble real sea shells.

• • • •

Angular and Silvery.

A modernistic mirror, which combines the angles of modernistic art with the silver sheen of a high grade mirror might prove a real objet d'art to the seeker of attractive century of progress pieces.

It hangs on the wall of a Twelfth street shop in the midst of many mirrors, but its curious and striking design makes it definitely one among many.

• • • •

For One Day Only.

A shipment of two-piece boucle dresses was bought by a downtown store to retail for $13.95. But with Easter only a few days off the price has been reduced—for one day only—to $8.88. Today's the day.

And whether it's true or not that the early bird gets the worm, it's a fact in this case that only the early shopper will get a dress.

• • • •

Small Scenes for Walls.

Plain and square tiles have been transformed into attractive wall pieces, hand-painted in silhouettes, landscapes, garden scenes, and so forth.

The F street shop which carries these says this is the season when women not only want to doll up themselves, but like to add a few decorations to the house. These painted tiles will interest limited budgets.

Waterproof Allure.

The woman who fails to make the best of her eyes truly hideth her light under a bushel. For it is through the medium of the eyes she is able to express subtler shades of feeling which words can only suggest.

Lashes give a look of mystery to eyes. They deepen the color, and make them appear large and luminous.

Very few women have lashes which do all this unaided. But the majority have lashes which respond beautifully after darkening has been carefully applied.

A downtown store has a new type of waterproff mascara which has an oil base, and does not make the lashes brittle and artificial looking. Neither does it run, nor irritate the eyes. Besides the usual black and brown, it comes in blue and green.

The woman without make-up wisdom should be careful how she uses colored mascara, but she who knows how can be daring to good advantage.

Cakes, Icings, Sauces, Hams Among the Intriguing Dishes.

Congressional women yesterday afternoon proved themselves as adept at cooking school management as they are reputed to be at tilting teacups.

With electricians completing their last minute hook-ups, messenger boys arriving with merchandise from 46 different companies, and carpenters driving the final nails in the frame supporting the portable electric kitchen, members of the Congressional Club, under supervision of Mrs. Clarence C. Dill, president, worked steadily until the time for the opening of the school.

While Mrs. Thomas Cochran, chairman of display, unpacked and arranging merchandise on the long table extending the length of the room, Mrs. A. H. Gasque, chairman of supplies, checked contributions.

Chairman Arranges Exhibits.

Assisted by Mrs. Joseph A. Herbert, jr., and Mrs. W. W. Hastings, Mrs. Guy D. Goff, as chairman, devoted her time to the coffee table and the arrangement of flowers, Easter baskets of candy, cakes and salads sent in by club members.

Among the dishes prepared by recipes in the Congressional Cook Book and sent in by club members to be auctioned at the session were the following: Cream Cheese Cookies, Orange Frozen Jelly, and New Deal Fudge, contributed by Mrs. Dill; Eggless Milkless War Cake, by Mrs. Elbert D. Thomas; Applemco Cake, by Mrs. Nathaniel Dial; Overnight Salad, by Mrs. Randolph Carpenter; Angel Food Cake, by Mrs. Claude A. Fuller; 24-Hour Salad and Date Nut Loaf, by Mrs. Terry Carpenter.

Assistants for the afternoon—acting as ushers, passing potato chips, serving coffee—included Miss Katherine Overton, Miss Lillian Hastings, and Miss Ann Blanton.

Dishes featured at the first session and prepared by recipes in the Congressional Cook Book were in keeping with the National Day theme.

The Baked Ham recipe, contributed to the book by Mrs. John G. Pollard, wife of the former Governor of Virginia, follows:

Baked Ham.

1 ham—10 to 15 lbs.
Brown sugar
1 tablespoon mustard
Vinegar and whole cloves

Wash and soak ham 1 hour in hot water. Place on rack in baking pan, skin side up. Bake in oven at 250 degrees for 4 or 5 hours. Remove from pan, peel off skin, remove excess fat, and rub with brown sugar mixture. Stick with whole cloves, and return to oven to brown.

Mrs. Randolph Carpenter gave the recipe for:

24-Hour Salad.

1 small can pineapple (drained).
1 cup white grapes, seeded and halved.
1 pound marshmallows.

Mrs. Guy D. Goff, left, chairman of the Congressional Club's cooking school, and Mrs. Terry Carpenter are shown above preparing for the school's session at the Willard Hotel.

4 egg yolks—beaten light.
½ cup sweet milk, scalded.
Juice of 1 lemon.
1 pint of cream; whipped.
¼ tablespoon dry mustard.

Combine egg yolks, milk and mustard and cook over low flame until of custard consistency. Add lemon juice and cool. Fold in whipped cream and fruit mixture. Turn into fancy ring mold and place in refrigerator for 24 hours.

The Seven-Minute Icing, used at the cooking school for plain Hostess Cake and printed in the cook book over the name of Mrs. Lynn J. Frazier, of North Dakota, is as follows:

Seven-Minute Icing.

1 cup sugar.
¼ tablespoon salt.
½ tablespoon cream tartar.
2 unbeaten egg whites.
3 tablespoons orange juice.
Grated rind of ½ orange.

Put all of above ingredients in top section of double boiler. Pour boiling water into lower section. Beat with electric mixer for 4 minutes. Now ready for plain cake.

Mrs. Thomas W. Phillips, jr., of Pennsylvania, was accredited with the recipe for:

Hollandaise Sauce.

3 egg yolks.
Juice of ½ lemon.
1 tablespoon salt.
Dash of cayenne and paprika.
½ cup boiling water.

Cream butter, add egg yolks and beat well. Add lemon juice, salt, pepper and paprika. Five minutes before serving add boiling water, slowly, stirring well. Place over low flame and stir rapidly until sauce thickens to consistency of boiled custard.

Mrs. Clarence F. Lea's recipe for Harvard Beets was also used:

Harvard Beets.

3 bunches small beets.
½ cup sugar.
½ tablespoon cornstarch.
½ cup vinegar.
2 tablespoons butter.
1 tablespoon salt.

Peel and cube beets. Place in saucepan with ½ cup water and salt. Cover and place over high flame until steaming. Turn to low flame and steam 20 minutes. Make a sauce by combining sugar and cornstarch and adding vinegar. Pour over beets and cook 15 minutes longer over low flame. Add butter and serve.

Mrs. C. C. Dickinson, of Missouri, contributed the recipe for:

Cheese Souffle.

2 tablespoons butter.
2 tablespoons flour.
1 cup milk.
½ tablespoon salt and dash of cayenne.
4 eggs.
1 cup grated cheese.

Make a white sauce of butter, flour, milk and seasoning over low flame. Add cheese, stir until melted. Add well-beaten egg yolks, then fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Turn into well-buttered baking dish. Place in pan lined with several folds of dampened paper. Bake in hot oven for 25 minutes.

The Upside Down Cake was prepared according to the recipe of Mrs. Finley H. Gray, as follows:

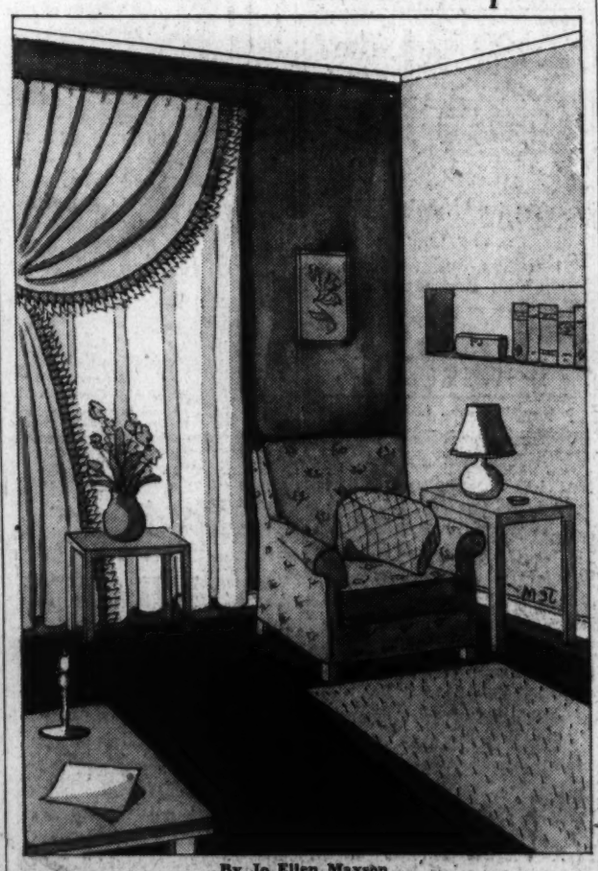
Upside Down Cake.

3 eggs well beaten.
1 cup pineapple juice
1½ cups flour
1 cup sugar
6 slices pineapple
3 tablespoons baking powder
½ cup granulated sugar
½ cup brown sugar
4 tablespoons butter
cherries

Melt sugar and butter in pan over high flame. Lay slices of pineapple over the sugar mixture. Place cherries in center of each pineapple slice. Pour batter (made by beating eggs and adding sugar, pineapple juice and flour sifted with baking powder) over pineapple and bake in hot oven for about 45 minutes.

Today's session of the cooking school, which will feature international dishes, will be held at the same time (1:30) at the Willard Hotel. Mrs. Dill announces it will be open to all Washington women.

Decoration on Gold Standard; All Shades of Yellow Popular



By Jo Ellen Maxson.

DECORATING is again back on the gold standard. Yellows ranging from vivid Chinese to palest lemon are among the smart spring shades

From a practical standpoint, yellow is a splendid color to use as a theme throughout an entire apartment because of the many hues which combine well with it.

From a decorative point of view, yellow signifies sunshine, light and spaciousness, all of which are welcome in smaller apartments and houses.

In the living room of a two-room apartment the walls are painted deep Empire yellow with the woodwork and ceiling in antique ivory. A dull jade green rug is used on the floor to supply a strong note of contrast. The draperies are of soft yellow semi-glazed chintz with pleatings of white and apricot. The glass curtains are of lemon colored cotton net.

The sofa is upholstered in green wool in a rough, diagonal weave with fine stripings of white. It is edged with thick white fringe. Another chair is covered in glazed chintz in a pattern of green and white on an apricot background. The lamps are of jade green pottery with severely tailored shades of stretched yellow taffeta.

In the bedroom the walls are light, sunny yellow with the woodwork in antique ivory. The draperies are of wide-wale yellow pique with polka dots of turquoise blue. The glass curtains are of lemon net.

The walnut beds have spreads of turquoise seersucker in the new crinkled effect with diagonal stitchings in yellow. The dressing-table has an overskirt of the yellow pique with turquoise dots. Three small scatter rugs are in deep yellow.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Silicosis.

Two great groups are very much interested in silicosis. One is the employers who are conducting industries in which there is exposure to dust. The other groups consist of the thousands of people who work in these industries. Lawyers and legislators make up another group—one that buzzes around the other two.

The industries that are especially interested are as follows: Pointing of stone and brick houses, sandblasting, foundry work, mills, castings, sand mining, sandstone workers, glass, mining, particularly underground work in quartz (and, in lesser measure, granite), coal mining, asbestos mining and metal grinding and polishing.

As in the case of lead poisoning, the progress of the disease, silicosis, does not stop at once when exposure to dust is stopped. It may go on during the period of subsequent absorption and excretion. The harm done in silicosis is done to the lungs. It causes the fibrous tissue of the lungs to thicken up. Breathing becomes rapid and difficult. In time, extra work is thrown on the heart as well as on the lungs. The heart beat, as well as the breathing, becomes labored. Eventually, the digestion suffers. In many cases the ground work is laid for consumption and the pneumonias.

G. O. P. Women Officially Open New Clubhouse

New York, March 27.—The new nine-story, $300,000 home of the Women's National Republican Club at 3 West Fifty-first street is now officially opened.

Standing on the site of the old Andrew Carnegie home, the clubhouse was built by money subscribed by women in 44 States and the District of Columbia. It was built at this time to give work to unemployed and to show confidence in the stability of the Nation, as well as in the Republican party.

In addition to money gifts there have been many contributions of furniture and decorative objects. Distinguished because of its Colonial architecture, the building has the quiet dignity which marked the old Carnegie house. All of the original marble mantels and lighting fixtures have been preserved.

The club office, telephone booths, coat rooms and dressing rooms are located on the ground floor. The first floor, divided by a large hall, contains the assembly room and a reception room and pantry on one side. On the other is the main room, a story and a half high. The other half story has been divided into two private dining rooms.

The main dining room is located on the next floor, while the fourth floor contains the main lounge.

In the rear, a flight of stairs leads to the Coolidge library, distinguished by its wood paneling which features Adams' portrait of the late President.

Business offices, the board room, the president's room and the house director's apartment are on the fifth floor.

The three floors above are given over to 30 bedrooms, each with a private bath and all furnished in the colonial manner. There is a roof solarium, equipped with vitaglass.

Among the leading Republicans who attended the opening were Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Ogden Mills and Col. William Donovan.

Williamsport to Have A Woman Postmaster

The Dragon Murder Case

By S. S. Van Dine

The Story Thus Far.

Philo Vance and District Attorney Markham, with Sergt. Heath, are investigating the strange disappearance of Sanford Montague in the old Dragon Pool on the Stamm estate. According to Leland, one of Stamm's guests, each member of the house party had sufficient motive for murdering Montague, with the exception of Bernice Stamm, to whom he was engaged. Stamm himself was helplessly intoxicated at the time of the tragedy. Stamm's mother, who is mentally unbalanced, insists that the "dragon" removed Montague because he was an "enemy of the family."

The following morning the pool is drained, but there is no sign of a body. Instead, in the thick mud of the bottom they see the imprint of a scaly hoof and huge, three-taloned claw!

Searching Montague's clothing, Vance finds a scented note in feminine handwriting arranging a rendezvous on the far side of the pool at 10 p. m., the hour at which Montague disappeared. The note is signed "Ellen," presumably Ellen Bruett, who was to have been one of Stamm's guests, but who sailed for South America instead. Bernice Stamm remembers having heard a car start up during the search for Montague. Vance suspects the girl is attempting to shield some one.

"There was one thing Mrs. Stamm said," Vance persisted, "that strikes me as unusually fantastic. In speaking of the place where the dragon hides his victims, she mentioned that it was older than both history and man, and that it was shaped for him when the world was young. Have you any idea what she could have meant by that?"

Leland frowned thoughtfully for a moment. Then his face lighted up, and he took his pipe from his mouth.

"The potholes, of course!" he exclaimed. "Her description fits them perfectly. The glacial pot holes, you know—there are several of them at the foot of the rocks near the Clove. They were fashioned in the ice age—the result of glacial gyrations, I believe—but they are really nothing but small cylindrical cavities in the rocks——"

"Yes, yes, I know what potholes are," Vance interrupted, with a note of suppressed excitement. "But I didn't know there were any in Inwood. How far are they from here?"

"Ten minutes' walk, I should say, toward the Clove."

"Near the East Road?"

"Just to the west of it."

"What wild-goose chase is this, Vance?" Markham protested, as we went through the vestibule and down the front steps.

"I don't know, old dear," Vance admitted readily. "But I have a cravin' just now to see those potholes."

He stepped into his car and we climbed in after him, as if led irresistibly by the tenseness of his decision. A moment later we were circling the house on the south and turning into the East Road. At the boundary of the estate, Snitkin opened the gate for us, and we drove rapidly past the Bird Refuge and on toward the Clove.

We had gone perhaps 500 yards when Leland gave the signal to stop. Vance drew up at the side of the road and stepped down. We were about 50 feet from the base of a precipitous rocky ridge which was an extension of the cliff that formed the north boundary of the Dragon Pool.

We had now come to the foot of the cliff. Before us, as if chiseled in the steep rock, was a great irregular, oval scar, perhaps twenty feet long and spreading outward toward the bottom to a width of about 4 feet—it was as if some falling meteor had dropped perpendicularly and cut its pathway along the rock and down into the earth. Across the bottom of this upright tunnel was the projection of the frontal rock, about 5 feet high, which formed a sort of wall across the lower section of the pothole, making of it a miniature well.

"That is the most interesting of the potholes," Leland explained.

Markham was standing behind him.

"What, in the name of heaven, do you expect to find here, Vance?" he asked irritably. "Surely, you're not taking Mrs. Stamm's maunderings seriously."

Vance, by this time, had climbed on the low wall and was looking over into the depths of the pothole.

"It might interest you, nevertheless, to see the interior of this pothole," he said, without turning his eyes from the depths beyond.

There was an unwonted note of awe in his voice, and we quickly came to the edge of the narrow stone wall and looked over into the ancient rock cavity.

And there we saw the huddled, mangled body of a man in a bathing suit.

"That is poor Montague," said Leland simply.

Chapter XIV.

A Sinister Phrophecy.

(Sunday, August 12, 2:30 p. m.)

There was a grim look on Leland's face as he stared down into the pothole, but there was no astonishment in his expression; and he gave me the impression of having anticipated the result of our short ride.

After identifying the body as that of Montague he slid down the wall and stood looking thoughtfully at the cliffs at the left. His eyes were clouded and his jaw was set rigidly as he reached in his pocket for his pipe.

"The dragon theory seems to be working out consistently," he commented, as if thinking aloud.

"Oh, quite," murmured Vance. "Too consistently, I should say. Fancy finding the johnny here. It's a bit rococo, don't y' know."

What Today Means

"Aries."

If March 28 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:30 to 9:30 a. m., from 1:30 to 2:30 p. m. and from 5:30 to 6:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 10:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 3:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 8:30 p. m.

You should cultivate the habit of being mentally alert. Do not let unimportant subjects, or issues, occupy your thoughts. Learn to concentrate on worth-while subjects. Some people go through life as if they were continually in a mental haze, and were living in a vague, strange land, whose language was beyond their comprehension. This is due to their allowing themselves to lazily drift into the habit of being preoccupied by a kaleidoscopic variation of unimportant thoughts, so there is no room for constructive, or useful ones. Today it is necessary to keep awake intellectually if the race of life is going to be successfully run. This is a propitious day for extending or accepting invitations of a social nature.

The child born on March 28, as it grows up, must be taught not to be slothful. Children born on this date must learn how to apply their energy in the proper manner, not only physically but mentally as well. Possessing a high degree of intelligence, they readily grasp an idea, especially if they are convinced as to its soundness.

If March 28 is your natal day, you will find it to your advantage never to evade an issue. Cultivate the habit of being positive. The negative type of person, who is swayed first in one and then in another direction of thought by the opinions of others, always find themselves in an unenviable state of mind.

The man born on March 28, if he has not already reached his goal, need fear no discouragement, for many men, born on this date, do not make their real success until they have passed the so-called "prime of life." If this is your birthday, never let discouragement deter your efforts, for if you persist and keep faith with yourself ultimate victory is assured.

Graceful as an Artist's Model

I couldn't help but overhear what they said about me . . . cruel, sarcastic, biting things about my fat. It was awful. I was a social outcast in spite of diet, exercise and drastic purgatives. For nothing did me any good. Everything I ate turned to fat.

Then, a real friend told me of a simple corrective for abnormal obesity, prescribed by doctors the world over, and put up in convenient tablets containing the right quantity. I took 4 a day. Results were amazing. I ate what I liked, took no purgatives or exercise, yet all that excess fat disappeared. Today I'm as slender and graceful as an artist's model.

That is what thousands who have reduced the Marmola way might well tell you if they had the chance. Would you like to learn their secret? Then buy a package of Marmola, read the simple directions, and start at once to get rid of burdensome fat!

Marmola is put up by one of the best known medical laboratories in America. Since 1907 men and women have purchased more than 20 million packages. Could any better recommendation be had?

Woman Attorney Dashes About the Country Defending Government in Tax Cases

Press Women Hear Cartoonist On Journalism

"Ding" Also Speaks on Conservation of American Wild Life.

"I'D RATHER work on a newspaper 24 hours a day than do anything else in the world," Jay N. Darling, cartoonist, more widely known as "Ding," told members of the Women's National Press Club at a luncheon yesterday at the Willard Hotel.

"However," Mr. Darling added, "I am now in something else because I believe I can be of better service in it."

He referred to his newly accepted position as chief of the Biological Survey in the Department of Agriculture. He is also a member of the committee on wild life and restoration. In this latter capacity he is particularly interested in promoting a project to protect the remaining game in this country. Stating that President Roosevelt was "heart and soul for the project," Mr. Darling enumerated the major points around which the conservation program has been designed.

"Our chief interest," he said, "is in providing sufficient covering for wild life. Americans have stolen land from nature they can not possibly use. They have cleared this land to plant more wheat and corn than they can possibly sell. Yet they go on relentlessly clearing land. As a result, wild life is fast disappearing because there is not enough left to protect wild animals and to provide them with food."

Mr. Darling explained that by "wild life" he meant all forms of animal life. "To many persons wild life means nothing but ducks," he said.

The cartoonist advocated the planting of undergrowth in areas cleared of trees and not used for farming purposes. He said water had been drained from so many acres in Northern States there was danger of a desert developing.

Mr. Darling's talk was mostly concerned with his early experiences as a journalist and cartoonist.

Cotton Season Spring Forecast

Organdies, Cottons, Tweeds, to Be Seen Around the Town.

For the last two or three springs retailers and wholesalers, everybody in fact in any way connected with the business of clothing the feminine contingent, have whooped up cottons, lustily announcing this will be a cotton season.

It's the same this year, and the prophecies, correct before, will probably hold true again.

One indication is in the prevalence of organdy. Organdy is all over the place and in a much improved form. In the last several seasons it was retrieved from its limpness-through-dampness and made pleasantly uncrushable. Now it goes in for new crinkles, literally. These crinkles aren't ordinary. They come in all sorts of fantastic patterns, waffles, plaids, checks, stripes, and are grand worked up in very simple evening or dinner dresses. (The material is elaborate enough to carry severe cut, and all that sort of business.)

Organdy is also printed more than formerly. Large, splashy floral designs are on the crest of the style wave, along with more tailored, geometric effects. Both of these make attractive dinner jacket suits, particularly for the young and ingenue.

Brought in by cotton's third or fourth renascence, come cotton tweeds. This stuff is uncrushable, too, consequently very handy for town or country or any kind of wear. It comes in sort of porous weaves, announced by the best authorities to be fine for tailored suits, particularly if said suits are lined with the same cotton that goes into the blouses. Topcoats made of this material will look exceedingly well.

Nets step into the fashion spotlight, crisp, floaty ones that make charming evening dresses and dinner suits. Uncrushable voiles will step out on hot streets this late spring and summer, ideal and cool for sweltering sidewalks.

The vote of confidence given to the shorts trend is providing a field day for cottons. Seersucker jumps to the front, in all kinds of patterns, not just the old familiar stripes. Ginghams, linens and even lightweight gabardines are used.

Anyway, as all followers of styles have heard for the past year or two, it'll be a cotton season.

'Petticoat Rule' Repulsed In Town's Political Fight

Bradgate, Iowa, March 27 (AP).—Males are in command in Bradgate again after repulsing a determined bid for what they called "petticoat rule."

A political battle of the sexes culminated last night in the defeat of an all-women's ticket, headed by Mrs. Perry Lanning for mayor. A one-sided victory gave the mayoralty to L. A. Malcolm and all council seats were filled by men.

The women first tasted victory in 1930, when Mrs. Clarence Burr was elected mayor and one woman won a council seat. This year the sex rallied into the field with a complete ticket.

Two factions of males sprang up to do battle with them and the voters recorded their decision yesterday.

Models Resemble Debs, Not Chorus Girls, Now

Five-Dollar-an-Hour Faces That Look Alluringly From Advertisement Belong to Girls Who Find Their Profession Exacting.

Glamorous ladies of the advertisements—those nameless faces that compel your attention to the printed page—find theirs is an exacting profession and one subject to the whims of changing styles. Here is the first in a series of four features on those girls who make their living by posing for photographs, modeling clothes or standing on the artist's dais.

By Elenore Kellogg.

NEW YORK, March 27 (AP).—The model who looks like a chorus girl is out, and the model who looks like a debutante is in, whether it be to show the newest in spring suits or to pose carelessly beside the latest streamlined limousines.

Five-dollar-an-hour faces are those that look like "ladies," or at least like the advertiser's idea of ladies.

Not only is the theatrical type of model out, but models no longer are known by that term. They are "subjects," and modeling has become a smart career, it was learned today at first hand.

Agency Busy Place.

The models' agency was like a small stockbroker's office. Seven telephones kept ringing. A girl clerk scrawled figures (they were hours, not prices) on a bulletin board filled with names.

In and out of the office sauntered the youth and beauty of modeldom—the girls whose faces look at you from newspapers, magazines and posters, tilting their favorite brand of cigarette, exhibiting the dernier cri in spring hats or stepping delicately from high priced automobiles.

These $5 an hour faces are destined, some of them, for the screen, some for drawing rooms of wealth or for success in business.

Some of them are a bit supercilious about the movies because, they say, these are not properly appreciative of type and use a Ziegfeld beauty where the script calls for a grande dame.

Decline Movie Contracts.

Ethelyn Holt, last year's most famous cigarette girl, who set a new fashion in hats as well, was offered a movie contract, but declined.

Lillian Kenton, another "star" of cigarette advertising, likewise casts no longing eyes toward Hollywood. She has stage ambitions, but said modeling "is pleasant, pays well and for Howard Chandler Christy and others before she discovered posing for fashion advertisements is easier and pays more.

Still at a finishing school, Bethany I haven't done anything" about getting before the footlights.

And Margaret Tanner, of Lynchburg, Va., frowns on the movies, too. Miss Tanner worked in a Lynchburg store two years to be made a buyer because that was the only way her mother would let her come to New York. She became a millinery designer and started modeling because she looked so well in her own hats.

Night life is taboo—it shows on the face—and Miss Tanner gets up early mornings to go swimming. She wants to remain a model until she is married.

School Girls and Artists.

Virginia Kaye, blonde and with a languid drawl, wanted to be an artist and thought being an artist's model would be a start. She posed Ann Beckwith, once of Flint, Mich., comes to the agency afternoons with a schoolgirl friend. Bright-eyed, dark, and wearing schoolgirlish clothes, she is in demand for automobile advertisements.

Helen Ressler, once of Ohio State University, makes a living by her tapering, picture-book hands. One sees them holding a cigarette, putting make-up on a face, serving as a background for jewels. She has them insured, but now and then gets out in the garden and digs in spite of everything.

Tomorrow—In the Couturiers' Shops.

Children Whippers Enemies of Society

Psychologist Says Beatings Make Criminals.

New York, March 27 (Spl.).—A woman who whips a baby is a dangerous enemy, not only to the child but to society.

Dr. Ellaine Ellmore emphasized this point in her address to members of the Child Welfare Association here today. Dr. Ellmore, who is a graduate of the University of Paris, and the author of a book on child psychology, "Children's Fears," is giving a series of lectures to teachers and other interested persons at the Social Service Bureau at New York University.

"A child who is the victim of whippings at the hands of a strong person in whose hands he feels helpless, sets up resentments that may blight him all his life," she said.

Dr. Ellmore declared a child should be corrected only by love.

Women Regard Lawyer Debate With Tolerance

Feminine Agitation Over Garnett's Ultimatum Calming Down.

Women lawyers of the city yesterday were inclined to regard with tolerance and some laughter District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett's statement that he did not intend to appoint any women as assistant District attorneys.

"It is never too later to change," Miss Mary Dewson, director of the women's division of the National Democratic party, said yesterday. "And I can only hope Mr. Garnett will see fit to change his mind. However, I do not think it wise to press the matter.

"Mr. Farley has stated he is confident there are enough capable persons to fill each vacancy and that he does not wish any official to appoint some one he does not want. But I feel sure there are Democratic women attorneys who are competent to fill the position of assistant District attorney. I believe when Mr. Garnett studies the matter impartially he will recognize this fact, and will not discriminate against women."

Mrs. Rebecca Greathouse, former assistant district attorney, and secretary of the National Woman's party, said:

"Mr. Garnett's stand reminds me of the statements made by the judges of the late nineteenth century, who refused to admit Belva Lockwood, pioneer woman lawyer in the District, to the Supreme Court. They refused on the grounds she was married. They were afraid if she were admitted it would set a bad precedent, and some day a judge might have to render a decision where his own wife was one of the lawyers. The theory was that the judge might be torn between justice and affection, and that affection might triumph. She was finally admitted by a special act of Congress. Today we think such incidents characteristic of a long-past era, and we laugh at them. It is amazing to find a man in public office today who holds such views."

"Mr. Garnett's statements are laughable," she concluded, "but they are also unfortunate in that they may injure the many competent women lawyers who depend upon their practice for a livelihood."

Disconcerted.

Assistant to Attorney General Handles Much Work on Trains

Helen Carloss Is First Woman to Argue Cases Before All U. S. Courts of Appeal; Went From Teaching to Government Work.

Escape! That is what Government work represents to some women. Escape from the dull, colorless life of a small town. Escape from monotonous, uninspiring work. A school teacher gave up a position in a little Mississippi town to accept an humble clerkship with the Government because she wanted to get away from teaching. She wanted to be where things were happening. Now the former school teacher and clerk is a special assistant to the Attorney General of the United States.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

THE HONOR OF BEING the first woman to argue cases before all of the United States courts of appeals belongs to Miss Helen R. Carloss, soft-voiced, dark-eyed daughter of Mississippi.

As these courts are scattered throughout the country, Miss Carloss, in the four years she has been special assistant to the Attorney General, has spent considerable time dashing off to San Francisco, New Orleans, Chicago and Atlanta to represent the Government in tax cases. She has also apeared before courts of appeals in New York, Boston, Kansas City, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Baltimore, Richmond and Asheville.

"But I spend at least half my time in Washington," explained Miss Carloss yesterday at her office in the Investment Building. "The cases are assigned to me here by the head of the tax division, Department of Justice. Then I prepare the briefs before I start on my travels."

Lots of Last-Minute Work.

But no matter how much time she spends on the briefs, this woman attorney has found there is always last-minute work to be done on the train. She says in spite of her travels she has seen very little of the country's scenery because all her waking hours on her trips are spent in going over legal papers.

The majority of Miss Carloss' cases are those that have been appealed from Federal district courts or from the board of tax appeals. In most instances, according to the special assistant to the Attorney General, the Government is attempting to collect more taxes than the taxpayer filed on his tax return. She explained this condition results from a difference in the interpretation of the law. Criminal tax cases are not in her province. She is assigned only those that require civil action and are argued entirely on points of law.

"My most interesting case?"

Miss Carloss studied the question for a moment before she replied, "Well, I believe it was the one I had in New Orleans last year which involved the evaluation of an application for a patent on cracking oil. It is by the cracking process that gasoline is extracted from oil. In this particular case we had to determine the value of the patent on the process so the Government could estimate the income of the patent holder."

Before she had finished with the case, Miss Carloss knew the complete history of the oil industry. She won her case. By her victory the Government received $500,000 in taxes.

A Habit of Winning Cases.

This woman lawyer has a habit of winning her cases. It has reached the point where opponents usually prepare for her by engaging three or four of the best men lawyers they can get.

In spite of her success as an attorney with the Government, Miss Carloss believes that a woman lawyer has a more interesting life and makes more money if she is engaged in private practice.

"Her experiences are more varied and usually more profitable, financially," declared the special assistant to the Attorney General. "But I would advise the young woman lawyer, when she starts out to build up a practice, to have enough money to see her through for at least two years. A man lawyer would probably need only enough money for one year. Since there is still a little prejudice against women in the legal profession, beginners should be prepared for a slow start. After they have built up practices I think they can go just as far as men attorneys."

This prejudice against women lawyers, where it exists, is invariably on the part of the layman believes Miss Carloss. She declared in every court where she has appeared the men attorneys have treated her with professional respect.

"They have never shown me any favors; they have treated me as an equal. That is the way it should be," she added.

Hated Teaching School.

Helen Carloss was born in Yazoo City, Miss., in the house that had belonged to her family for several generations. At the time she entered Mississippi State College for Women there were very few occupations considered suitable for girls from good Southern families Teaching school was the favored one. It was nice, clean, respectable work and paid a fairly good salary. So Helen Carloss became a teacher.

"I hated it. Simply hated it." Her dark eyes snapped as she recalled the unhappy experience. It was while she was looking about for something else to do—and she admits she would have done almost anything to get away from teaching—that one of her friends received a Government appointment. The little Mississippi town was all excited and saw the young woman off to Washington in great style. That gave Helen Carloss an idea. She, too, would go to Washington and work for the Government. It was 1918 when she came to the Capital.

She began as a clerk in the income tax division of the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Had Stroke of Luck.

"Of course, I had nothing to do with selecting the department in which I would work," she said. "I was so thrilled to be in Washington that I didn't care what department I was in or what my job was—at first. But after I had been in the income tax division for a few months, I realized there were opportunities for advancement."

Miss Carloss wanted to be ready for those opportunities. She enrolled in the law school of George Washington University and soon after she had received her LL.B. in 1923, she was made technical clerk in the rules and regulations section of the income tax division.

"That gave me a chance to apply my knowledge of law. But after I had spent five years as technical clerk I knew I had reached a standstill. Then I had a stroke of luck. One of the women attorneys at the Department of Justics went to Europe. I was appointed to take her place."

The appointment was made in March, 1928. Nine months later Helen Carloss was arguing cases. Two years later she was appointed special assistant to the Attorney General.

"And I'm still arguing cases," she smiled.

Music Experts Deny Anthem Ruins Voices

Throat Specialist Is Wrong in Condemning National Song, They Say.

Baltimore, March 27 (Spl.).—The throat specialist from Philadelphia who said singing the "Star-Spangled Banner" ruins more children's voices than any other song, has stirred up a hornet's nest in Baltimore—the place where the National Anthem was writen.

Frederick R. Huber, municipal director of music, was one of those who disagreed with the Philadelphia specialist. Whatever damage is done to children's voices by singing the anthem, he said, is caused by incompetent teaching.

John Denues, director of musical education in the public schools, declared teachers discouraged the practice of "mere yelling" by pupils in singing the "Star-Spangled Banner."

Mrs. Henrietta Baker Low, former director of musical education in the public schools, and now vocal director at Goucher College and in the Peabody Institute public school department, said she desires to make the experiments which will show whether or not the singing of the anthem is harmful to children's voices. She said the song is not difficult to sing if pupils are taught to render it properly.

And all the music experts agreed there is no need for a separate anthem for children, distinct from the "Star-Spangled Banner," which the Philadelphia specialist, Dr. Leon Felderman, said should be left for grown-ups. Mrs. Low said she had heard the song sung "charmingly" by children, and also "abominably" by both children and grown-ups.

The music teacher agreed "the high F" of the "Star-Spangled Banner" is not so difficult that it ruins childish voices, and they pointed out the German national anthem, "Die Wacht Am Rhein," has the same tone range as the supposedly difficult "Star-Spangled Banner."

Prince Georges Trolley Fare Slash Pushed

Chamber Advances Fight for Rate and Zone Reduction.

Further steps were taken by the Prince Georges (Md.) Chamber of Commerce Monday night to bring about reduction of zones and lower rates for street car and bus patrons in the county.

W. L. Mulligan, vice president, reported on efforts by the utilities committee of the chamber to effect transportation improvement. The committee is scheduled to confer with officials of the Capital Transit Co. Saturday, by invitation of C. Melvin Sharpe, executive assistant to the president of the utilities company.

The chamber is asking a straight 6-cent rate in Maryland on buses and a 5-cent rate on street cars, and for elimination of commutation books now in use. A 3-cent rate for school children, regardless of distance also is asked. Faster schedules also are recommended.

Reduction in the number of zones from 3 to 2, both on the car and bus lines between the District line and Beltsville, is sought, and also elimination of one of the two zones between Beltsville and Laurel on the bus line. The car line between Beltsville and Laurel was abandoned several years ago.

The chamber indorsed the action of the Prince Georges County Democratic State Central Committee in recommending the appointment of a member of the bar for the position of judge of the county caused by the death of Judge J. Chew Sheriff.

"LADEEZE an gentlemen . . . pre-e-e-zenting the second wonder of the world . . . the Tatooed Lady . . . the only gen-u-wine one in captivahtee . . . the Big Show positively starts in five minutes . . . Hurry, hurry, hurry if you want to see Minnie the Wild Girl . . . she has the strength of two men and a head the size of your fist."

C. B. S. announcers will be on the spot with microphones set up in the sawdust at strategic points to catch the plaudits of the crowds . . . the blare of the calliope mingling in glorious confusion with shouts of lemonade vendors, the roaring of lions and the crackle of the ringmaster's whip. You'll hear everything and almost get a whiff of the tanback.

EASTER'S display will flaunt the usual crop of silk toppers, chic feminine ensembles and more than a few uncomfortable youngsters carefully dressed for church. And the languorous pungency of flowers will be eclipsed by brilliant, laughing smiles from feminine eyes.

But the final exaltation of Easter will throb in rich, full-toned organ music weaving a spell of distant enchantment through cool Gothic chapels to the accompaniment of a boys' choir. Can you see their faces wrapped in solemnity and hear the thrush-like notes of their voices?

Easter's theme will be on the air when Albert Spalding plays the "Good Friday Spell" from Wagner's religious drama, "Parsifal" today at 8:30 p. m. over WJSV. The passage he plays will be from the third act of the opera in which Parsifal, just consecrated King of the Grail, baptizes Kundry. As the soft weaving of the "Good Friday" theme rises in the orchestra, Parsifal looks out over the woods and sings of the glory of nature. Gurnemanz then explains that this beauty is caused by the spell of Good Friday and that the flowering of the trees, watered by the tears of repentant sinners, expresses the redemption of man.

The same program will feature Conrad Thibault's singing of Faure's "The Palms." Spalding will also contribute Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" and an elaborate arrangement of Rubinstein's familiar "Melody in F," enlisting the talents of Thibault, a mixed chorus and Don Voorhees' Orchestra.

ALICE RINEHEART also has vocal appeal. Appearing with the Red Davis sketches over an N. B. C. network from New York, she is known as the "girl with the heart throb voice." Miss Rineheart is fast gaining a reputation as a dramatic actress.

RUDOLF SCHRAMM, well known Washington musician, who directed the orchestra Monday night during The Post's broadcast of "Headlines of Yesterday," was asked to bring some appropriate baseball music to WMAL's studio to fit in with the continuity.

Being a German, a well-trained musician but not "up" on America's favorite outdoor sport, Schramm thought he had just the right number for the broadcast. Every one expected that familiar ditty, "Take Me Out to the Ball Game." But five minutes before the program was to go on the air Rudy smilingly reached into his portfolio and took out a copy of "After the Ball Is Over."

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen speaks today at 6:15 over WJSV on the Children's Week program. Senator Arthur Capper (Kansas) will speak Friday for the same cause—that of promoting White Cross Seals for Crippled Children.

"The Witch's Tale," an eerie, weird drama of the supernatural with haunting specters rising from evil pasts, will be curdled over WJSV at 10:30 p. m. Friday with spine-prickling thrills . . . breathless suspense . . . romance, adventure, love and . . . the unknown. Lower the lights on this one.

Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper will leave the long halls of the Commerce Department Building today to step over to WRC's studio. He will speak on the National aspects of the motor vehicle accident problem at 2 p. m.

Held under the auspices of the National Safety Council, the program will announce the winners in the six cities in the United States in which the fewest traffic accidents occurred in 1933. More than 300 municipalities were graded, first on a lowered highway death rate, and, secondly, on the setting up of administrative machinery and the conduct of educational activities which, according to experience, are certain to bring about accident reduction.

Whitecaps.

WRC—Guilford College Chorus of 65 mixed voices, 11:15 a. m.; Secretary of Commerce Roper and Floyd Gibbons speaking on National Safety Council program, 2 p. m.; Frank C. Hutchins, treasurer of Yale-in-China, speaking on "Four Hundred and Fifty Million Chinese," 3:30 p. m.; "The Ghost of Hermitage Castle," eerie drama, 10:30 p. m.

ENTERED AS SECOND CLASS MATTER, POSTOFFICE, WASHINGTON, D. C.

$1,710,164 To Be Spent Here by CWA

Work on D. C. Projects Starts Monday; 1,500 Dismissed.

90 Per Cent of Total to Be Expended on Labor.

The work planning and job assigning committee of the District CWA yesterday approved projects which will cost $1,710,164, under the emergency work program, which will begin next Monday. Capt. Howard F. Clark, executive officer of the CWA, estimates 90 per cent of this will go to wages.

Among the projects which have been approved are: U. S. Soldiers Home, $69,998; highway department, $935,000; school grounds, $100,000; Army War College, $22,612; Gallinger Hospital, $127,261; sewer department, $327,573; Industrial Home School, $5,194; Bolling Field, $34,154; Navy Yard, $44,704; Naval Observatory, $630, and the National Guard, $26,244.

The District yesterday dismissed 1,500 skilled workers from the CWA ranks, and they will be unable to obtain employment unless they subsequently place their names on direct relief rolls, because all persons to be employed on the new program must be taken from the relief rolls. A revision of this order is to be sought by the work-planning committee.

Maj. Joseph D. Arthur, jr., District engineer of the War Department for the Washington area, yesterday recommended to Capt. Clark that further demolition of the Aqueduct Bridge should be a part of the emergency works program.

Virginia Rural Aid Program Is Announced

Project's Aim Is to Make State's Needy Families Self-Sustaining.

Richmond, March 27 (AP).—A rehabilitation program for country regions and towns of less than 5,000 population will be inaugurated in Virginia April 1, William A. Smith, Virginia emergency relief administrator, announced today.

Mr. Smith said the objective of the program "is to make it possible for destitute persons eligible for relief in such areas to sustain themselves through their own efforts."

"It is evident that where dwellings have even very small tracts of land available for the production of home gardens and for feed for domestic live stock and poultry the average family, when provided with such live stock and poultry, can produce a major part of its food requirements," Mr. Smith said.

He added that, supplementary to the self-sustenance measures, assistance will be given in securing employment in crop preparation or other private enterprises, or on local public works.

The FERA administrator announced also the transfer of the Virginia CCC registration headquarters from the offices of Arthur W. James, public welfare commissioner, to the Virginia Emergency Relief Administration, with Walter Smith appointed as CCC registration officer for the State.

New Streamlined, Silent Trams Soon Expect to Be Reality.

Swift, silent, stream-lined street cars are to replace the present rolling stock of the Capital Transit Co., casting the heavier, slower trams of today into as deep obscurity as the horse cars of yesteryear.

This prediction was made yesterday by John H. Hanna, president of the company, who added that the innovation might take place in little more than a year.

There is every possibility, too, that when the replacement comes it will be complete, with the new cars operating on every line.

Hanna's opinion is backed by those of other transit experts. These authorities state the present equipment of the Washington company could be replaced with modern equipment which would pay for itself in four years, mainly through decreased maintenance costs.

About three years ago, experimentation began on the new cars. By autumn, the first new conveyors will be turned out. These are being constructed by the Electric Railway Presidents' Conference committee, a group of 25 of the more important electric railway executives and manufacturers of electric railway equipment. All members of the committee, on which the Capital Transit Co. has representation, have been contributing funds to the development of the new car.

The result is a vehicle considerably lighter in weight—25,000 pounds as against 40,000 pounds for the old car.

Its size and seating capacity are much the same. Major changes involved design of wheels, trucks, controls, motors and gearing.

Recently an expert from the Public Utilities Commission and a representative of the Capital Transit Co. visited Philadelphia and observed the performance of another modern car, being constructed there for the Chicago surface lines.

The vehicle can glide over the rails at a top speed of 42 miles per hour, and accelerate, from a standing start, at the maximum rate of 5 miles per hour per second. Thus, when automobiles shoot ahead on the green light during a traffic jam, it can keep pace.

Silence has been stressed in its development. With rubber insulation throughout it, and rubber cushions between the axle and rim, noise has been reduced to a minimum. In operation the car can not be heard above the ordinary hum of downtown traffic.

Superior braking equipment enables the car to stop quicker. By acceleration speed and braking ability, the new car can put up to 15 per cent from the time for runs of the present cars.

Other features of the car are streamlining, more comfortable seating, and new and improved types of heating and ventilation.

Percy Brown Dies at Home In Albemarle

Burial Rites Will Be Held at Nashville Today.

Charlottesville, Va., March 27 (Spl.).—Percy Brown, prominent Albermarle County resident and veteran of Roosevelt's Rough Riders in the Spanish-American War, died yesterday at his home, Hillcrest Farm, near here.

Funeral services were held from the residence at 3:30 p. m. today, conducted by Dr. Robert F. Gibson, rector of Christ Episcopal Church. The body was sent to Nashville, Tenn., where burial rites will be held tomorrow.

Mr. Brown was born April 6, 1874, at Ewell Farm, near Spring Hill, Tenn., the son of Maj. and Mrs. Campbell Brown. His early education was obtained at Pantops Academy, near here. Later he attended the University of the South, at Sewanee, Tenn.; studied forestry at the Biltmore Forestry School, at Biltmore, N. C., and in the Black Forest of Germany.

Much of Mr. Brown's life was spent at Ewell Farm, a noted horse-breeding establishment. He was very active in forestry preservation work, and for a time was secretary of the Tennessee Forestry Association.

In 1926 Mr. Brown came to Virginia and purchased the Hillcrest Farm. During his residence here he took an active part in public affairs.

Mr. Brown married Miss Gertrude Hunter Plunkett, of Nashville, Tenn. She survives, with two children, Miss Gertrude Polk Brown, and Percy Brown, jr., a student at the University of North Carolina. He also leaves one brother, Dr. Lucius Brown, of Spring Hill, Tenn.

The deadline originally was set for April 1, but the announcement extended the date 15 days.

It was said that every effort is being made to avoid previous experiences with last minute rushes in the various stations for obtaining the new plates.

Hero of Fire at Lynchburg Would Prefer Job to Glory

Lynchburg, Va., March 27 (AP). William E. Dixon, former convict who led to a safe exit at least six survivors of the Transients' Bureau fire which took 17 lives and caused injuries to 70 other men here on Saturday, is tired of being called a hero.

"Please," he said today, "don't call me that for I was only doing God's will. If you wish to do anything for me, please help me get a job to do honest work. That is all I am asking for my part in trying to save the boys' lives."

Dixon came to Lynchburg, his former home, on February 14 after serving a 34-month prison term on a bigamy charge. Destitute, he was referred to the Federal Transients' Bureau.

He told today of becoming aware of the blaze and starting to pull other men out of their beds. "I did not think of my own life," he said. "I was thinking of saving the others. My life does not matter much."

Can Ickes Do It? Building Or a Dream?

New Interior Structure May Go the Way of Other Hopes.

These Designs Are Fine for Architects—IF They Get Paid.

Secretary Ickes has a habit of getting things done, so perhaps something will come of his auspicious plans for a new $10,000,000 Interior Department Building. Last week, he announced a Public Works allotment of $2,400 to make preliminary studies and drawings of the proposed structures.

It was just like old times.

If all the public buildings for which design funds have been appropriated and which have been authorized were constructed in the District, there would be enough to confound the most experienced sightseeing guide. If the Federal Government could retrieve the hundreds of thousands of dollars it has thrown away on architectural plans to put up new buildings or remodel old ones——.

But getting down to cases, consider the celebrated State, War and Navy Building with its 900 columns, French curlycues and all. A few years ago, Congress decided this architectural gem should be remodeled to make it conform with the Treasury and balance the White House. Waddy Wood was chosen to execute the design.

Approved: So What?

Wood turned in a design for the remodeled building, making it a dead image of the Treasury. It was approved, but that is as far as the project went. Congress turned thumbs down on an appropriation to carry through the job and the architect even had to go to the Court of Claims for his fee.

More recently, the Treasury Board of Architectural Consultants, Fine Arts Commission and National Capital Park and Planning Commission put their erudite heads together and agreed the Apex building should be built in the Federal triangle. Its construction had been authorized by Congress, the design had been approved and reapproved—everything was ready. But there was no money.

Whether or not the architects for this building, intended to house the Federal Trade Commission and other independent agencies, were paid has not been announced.

The classic example in the story of the Graveyard of Lost Buildings is the George Washington Memorial Building. Eventually, however, this distinction may be usurped by the Municipal Center.

Back when William Howard Taft was President and Elihu Root a Senator from New York, these two statesmen gave their help to a movement to construct a huge building in the Mall as a memorial to Washington. It was to have an auditorium seating 6,000 and available for inaugural receptions and great public gatherings.

Congress authorized the appropriation of $1,500,000 if a like amount could be raised by popular subscription. The campaign failed, but that did not prevent the foundation being dug. You can still see the 20-year-old hole at Sixth street and Constitution avenue.

Uncle Sam took a financial licking and so did a certain Washington woman who is reputed to have lost $100,000 on the venture.

About 30 years ago, $15,000 was spent on plans to remodel the White House. Nothing ever came of that, to the satisfaction of numerous Washington architects and officials who adjudged the design a monstrosity.

And So It Goes.

Yesterday, the Fine Arts Commission received for consideration a revised plan for remodeling the old pension office. Maybe this project will be consummated, maybe it won't. Money.

Last week the planning commission recommended that plans for the Municipal Center be modified on the side of economies. So far, $200,000 has been spent for designs and studies on this project alone. If the commission's scheme is adopted it may mean that part, if not all, of this expenditure was useless.

Thousands have been spent on studies for a monument garden, an armory for the District National Guard, a new Naval hospital, new buildings for the War and Navy Departments and an untold number of lesser developments. Last week the planning commission urged that $15,000 be allotted by PWA to draw up plans for the proposed municipal stadium. Another candidate for limbo.

Anyway, it makes fine business for architects and consultants—if they are getting paid.

Credit Sought In 5th District

Reserve Survey Reveals Demand in Average Business.

Richmond, March 27 (AP).—A substantial demand for credit by average business enterprises in the Fifth Federal Reserve Bank district was shown through a survey made in the five States and the District of Columbia, it was reported today by George J. Seay, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond.

While declining to make public the figures, Governor Seay said the survey was successful in ascertaining the extent of credit needs.

This information was obtained from the 12 Reserve districts by the Secretary of the Treasury to ascertain if the facts offered justification for enactment of legislation incident to financing the small business man and merchant in the recovery program.

The National survey reports indicate that extension of credit to these types of business would retain or give employment to approximately 500,000 persons, Seay said.

Municipal Taxes For Buses Upheld

High West Virginia Court Affrms City Rights.

Charleston, W. Va., March 27 (Spl.).—Reversing a ruling of the Ohio County Circuit Court, the State Supreme Court today upheld municipal mileage taxes on bus lines.

The ruling was given in a suit by the Eastern Ohio Transport Corporation against the city of Wheeling, in which the lower court had prohibited mileage taxes fixed by a city ordinance. The supreme court held that any municipality in the State is empowered to "regulate vehicular traffic," may "exercise reasonable discretion in limiting the number of stops of commercial buses," and "may also levy a reasonable charge upon commercial vehicles for maintenance of streets."

The bus company, operating between Wheeling and Bellaire, Ohio, attacked the limitation of stops and mileage fee as "unreasonable and discriminatory."

Liquor Board Gives Permit After Canvass

Protests of Minister Prompt Study by Investigators.

First Case Decided by Asking Reaction of Residents.

Over the protests of the Rev. James H. MacBroom, pastor of the Church of Christ, the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday granted a license to Mancari's Restaurant, 3459 Fourteenth street northwest, after it had determined the sentiment of the neighborhood through a canvass by its inspectors.

The board learned that 98 property owners were in favor of the granting of the license and 68 were opposed. This is the first time the board has decided a case by a canvass.

"In this case," the board decided, "the place for which the license is desired, is an appropriate one, considering the character of the premises, its surroundings and the wishes of the person residing in the vicinity."

Deny Rector Permit.

The board denied the application of Carey E. Rector, who asked for a license for his establishment at 5105 Conduit road northwest. This store is less than 200 feet from the nearest boundary of the Francis Scott Key School. Objections to the license were made by school officials and members of citizens' associations.

The application of Adolph Dianda for an off-sale light wine and beers license at 1601 Rhode Island avenue northeast was granted after the board had determined that 84 owners of nearby property were in favor of its issuance, while the owners of 31 tracts were opposed.

Alleged Contraband Found.

Evidence that ten cases of imported Scotch whisky, not bearing the necessary revenue stamps, had been shipped into the District, was turned over to the Internal Revenue Bureau yesterday by Maj. Jerome Johnstone, chief inspector of the Liquor Board.

Maj. Johnstone received a complaint that a Connecticut avenue establishment had been selling imported whiskies which did not bear revenue stamps. An inspector discovered ten cases of alleged contraband. No charges were placed against the proprietor pending investigation by the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Luke Sewell Narrowly Escapes Serious Injury as Tribe Downs Nats

Star Catcher To Be Lost 3 Days

Stone Again Batting Ace; Crowder Pounded as Hudlin Is Puzzle.

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor of The Post.)

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 27. The Nats suffered a fracture and contusions this afternoon—a fracture of their winning streak of one consecutive game, and contusions to the index finger of Catcher Luke Sewell's throwing hand—as they left their scalps with the Cleveland Indians in the exhibition league by a score of 5 to 3.

The Nats recovered immediately from the first-mentioned blow upon their realization at the end of the game that they could escape the pneumonia weather by hustling back to the hotel lobby where warmth and comfort awaited, but the accident to Sewell was fraught with disaster until an hour after the game, when fears of a fracture were finally dispelled by the infallible X-ray pictures.

Broken Digit Feared.

That innocent-looking pitch by Alvin Crowder that came a-floating over the plate in the first inning and caromed off Joe Vosmik's bat full into the outstretched finger of Sewell was pregnant with tragedy for several hours this afternoon following reports after a cursory examination that the digit had been broken.

As Trainer Mike Martin headed a funeral procession to the nearby Hotel Dieu Hospital, the spectre of three weeks' absence from the game and from the Nats' starting line-up when the season opens on April 16 loomed for Sewell, but the gloom lifted at the doctor's announcement that he would be ready to catch again within three days.

But the nearness of tragedy evoked a resolve by Manager Joe Cronin not to expose his veteran catchers to the hazards of exhibition games, and the bulk of the Nats' catching until the season starts will devolve on third-stringer Elmer Klumpp.

Almost Break for Bolton.

For a bit this afternoon, it appeared that hold-out Catcher Cliff Bolton had received a boon in his salary wrangle with Clark Griffith, whose attitude would have been materially softened if Sewell's finger had been seriously hurt.

While the Indians were making free with Alvin Crowder in the first three innings with the help of a renegade wind that blew pop flies into doubles, a bit of baseball romance was being enacted before the eyes of Clark Griffith, who watched from the stands while Willis Hudlin on the mound for Cleveland made the Nats roll over and play dead for the last five innings.

Over the week-end, Griffith had refused Cleveland's offer to trade Hudlin to Washington in exchange for Infielder Bob Boken, and while Boken kicked at least one ball around at shortstop for the Nats this afternoon, and otherwise performed ignobly, Hudlin was unboiling a fast ball that permitted the Nats only two hits.

Nats Take Early Lead.

Florida Ousts Four Men in Turf Fraud

MIAMI, Fla., March 27 (AP).—Four men, including the former superintendent of the mutuel room at Tropical Park, were permanently barred from all Florida tracks as the Florida Racing Commission tonight closed a two-day secret hearing of the details of an alleged conspiracy to defraud the horse race betting public of thousands of dollars.

The commission, in a statement given out by its secretary, Walter Donovan, exonerated the officers and directors of the Gables Racing Association, operators of the track, of "knowledge of, or participating in, any irregularities in connection with the charges."

Former Mutueds Manager.

Those banned from Florida tracks were James J.Walsh, a Canadian, who was removed as mutuels manager last Thursday after a preliminary presentation of the charges to the track operators by the commission; George O. Fox, take-off man and sheet writer; Artie Bieler an outside racing commisioner, and Leslie Britcher, who was in charge of the ticket room.

The commission's written statement said Walsh had been found guilty "of conspiracy to defraud and of fraud by manipulation in the mutuel department" and that the others were declared guilty of "participating in a fraud at Tropical Park by manipulation in the mutuel department."

Bruner and Shaffer May Join Frostburg

Frostburg, Md., March 27 (Spl.).—Al Bruner and Bobby Shaffer, hard-hitting infielders, who starred with the Corrigansville Hustlers in the Inter-State League last season, are seeking release from their contracts to play with the Frostburg Demons in the same circuit this year, according to Russell ("Mike") Diehl, manager of the latter club.

According to Bruner and Shaffer, they signed with Corrigansville recently with the understanding that they would be given their release in event they received jobs elsewhere. Through the efforts of Diehl both Bruner and Shaffer have been given employment in Frostburg.

Vines Contests Suit Over Tennis Articles

Los Angeles, March 27 (AP).—Ellsworth Vines, Pasadena tennis star, who was made defendant in a $250,000 damage suit by Norman T. Sper, sports syndicate operator, today asked the superior court to require Sper to render an accounting under a contract by which Sper was to syndicate tennis stories written by Vines.

Vines stated he believed Sper had failed to divide profits of the articles syndicated. Sper contends Vines terminated the contract without having permission or authority to do so.

Little Ray of Sunshine

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, N. Y., March 27 (Spl.).—See all the happy faces on the street. The news nas got abroad that Max Baer has gone into training on a ranch outside of Oakland, Calif. This is only the end of March and the fight is not scheduled to take place until the middle of June, but Baer evidently knows that he has an awful lot to boil out. He is the Americano's hope to end the rule of the Oaf of the Alps.

I must say that he has begun his training most auspiciously by running through the forests and underbrush of the Pacific slopes, stark naked, frightening grizzly bears, wolves, coyotes, mountain lions and birds and small game.

He has advised the press that he does this in order to acquire a coat of tan. He did not say whether the coat of tan was for beauty or as protective armor. If Da Preem can not punch any harder than he did against Loughran the coat of tan will be sufficient.

Two and a half months is not too long a time for Baer to prepare himself to acquire the world's heavyweight championship by trial of battle. There must be a lot of grease paint, stale tobacco smoke and sweet essence of night club atmosphere to sweat out through his pores before he can be pronounced fit for any rigorous athletics. For while he knocked out Max Schmeling with a couple of thunderous wallops and in a very dramatic manner, I do seem to remember a sort of a dull period in the fight when Master Baer seemed to be very, very tired and wasn't doing anything at all.

Of course, there is a possibility that Baer was only playing 'possum during those rounds of their fight where nothing much transpired; but to me he looked like a young fellow who had suddenly been overcome by fatigue. Baer does not want to become fatigued when he tackles the Oaf of the Alps. He will wish to be fresh as a daisy at all times so that when the Oaf gets rough he may escort him to a corner by the elbow as he did Schmeling and then box his ears. You can not do that when you are tired. And the Oaf makes you very tired during the course of the evening just by leaning on you.

In common with many of Baer's ardent supporters, I am hoping that he will not take his training task too seriously to the end of keeping decent hours, sending Eve out of his life and behaving himself with modesty, decorum and moderation. The fight may not be half as good as some of the things that Baer will do before it takes place.

His public infatuation for Miss June Knight, the blonde danseuse, was one of the lovelier highlights of the spring and early summer of 1933. I met Miss Knight down in Miami and she vowed that her heart was quite healed of the hurt put there by the gallant but not quite responsible Baer. Did I ever tell you what Ancil Hoffman, Baer's manager, said when the jeweler called him up and asked whether Baer would pay for the ring that had been selected to give to the lady? I'm sorry, I can't. Postoffice regulations, you know.

If and when Hoffman succeeds in getting Baer into the ring on June 14 in reasonable physical condition, Ancil's hair will be white. The lot of managing Baer is not a happy one. To qualify a man must really have a smattering of nursemaid, valet, private detective, night watchman, bank president, lawyer, casting director and director of the mint in his make-up. However, that is his worry. I make my money easier. I am in favor of more and funnier antics from the heavyweight challenger.

Yanks Blanked By Braves; Get 5 Hits

Shut-out First Time Since August; News From Other Camps.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 27 (AP).—Clarence Pickrel, young right-hander, blanked the New York Yankees with only five hits today as the Boston Braves slugged out a 6-to-0 decision. The shut-out was the first for the Yanks since Lefty Grove kept them from crossing the plate last August 18.

Working the entire game, Pickrel fanned five Yankees and gave only two bases on balls. Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Ben Chapman, Tony Lazzeri and Red Rolfe were the only Yanks to connect safely, each getting a single.

With a five-run attack in the first inning, the Braves scored all of their runs off Three-Finger Floyd Newkirk. Jimmy De Shong gave only four hits the last five innings.

Reds Score Sixth.

Fort Myers, Fla., March 27 (U.P.). The Cincinnati Reds today chalked up their sixth victory in seven exhibition games against major league opponents by beating the Athletics, 9 to 3.

Although Si Johnson and Joe Shaute allowed the A's 14 hits, they bore down in the pinches and prevented effective bunching. Meanwhile, the Reds made the most of the 11 safeties garnered off Cain and Mahaffey.

Giants Trim Bisons.

Miami Beach, Fla., March 27 (U.P.). The New York Giants today beat Buffalo's Bisons, of the International League, 4 to 2, in the first contest of a two-game series.

New York won out in the eighth when an error, two singles and a hit batter resulted in two runs. Milstead and Gordy allowed the Giants nine hits, while Hubbell and Bell held the Bisons to eight.

Tigers Break Streak.

Lakeland, Fla., March 27 (U.P.). The Detroit Tigers today snapped their losing streak at three straight and came from behind to down the Phillies, 9 to 5, after spotting them 5 runs in the first frame.

The Tigers came out of their batting slump to pound Hansen and Darrow for 13 hits, including Parker's home run in the seventh.

Hall Attacks Money Mad Golf Pros

They Do Anything, Kick Shove or Jab Ball, He Declares.

Ex-P. G. A. Head Says Form Real Measure of a Champion.

By Henry McLemore.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 27 (U.P.). Mr. Charley Hall, veteran Birmingham professional, one-time Professional Golf Association president, one-time longest driver in game, and now on the directorate of two banks, has little patience with winter golf tournaments.

In fact, Mr. Hall is of the mind that the money circuit, which opens late in the fall and carries right through March, is spoiling the game. Spoiling it, as he explained over a cup of tea at the Augusta National Club, by making form secondary to victory.

"This business of money tournament after money tournament," Mr. Hall said in a voice loaded with disgust, "is rapidly turning all the professionals into a bunch of bangers and nothing else. And if you paid any attention to the form of the players in the Masters Invitation you know I'm telling the truth.

Three Real Swingers.

"In all the field of 72 players there were just three real swingers—Bob Jones, Mac Smith and Ed Dudley. The boys have become so money mad and victory mad, they don't care how they get the ball down just so it goes down. They'll kick, shove it, jab it—do anything.

"Before it became the rage for professionals to make a living—or try to make a living—out of prize money, and they stayed at their home clubs and taught, it was a pleasure to watch the occasional big tournaments. In a field of a 100, 90 of the players would be stylish strokers, with real rhthym in their shots. But now, watching the big-name pros is like watching a troupe of second-rate acrobats.

Form Best Measure.

"I may be crazy, but to me the fact that a man finishes 72 holes in the fewest number of strokes doesn't necessarily make him a champion. Form is the soundest measure of a champion. Not only in golf, but in most of the other sports. Pass me a slice of lemon, please."

Mr. Hall didn't ask what I thought of his line of reasoning, but it seems to me that it's very sound when applied to some sports and very unsound when applied to others. In connection with boxing, it doesn't hold water. Take Dempsey and Loughran when they were in their prime, for example. Loughran was a master craftsman whose every move was perfection. Dempsey was just the opposite, but who would place Tommy above Jack as a champion?

All Right in Tennis.

In tennis, Mr. Hall's reasoning is all right. Bryant Grant, to choose a man whose style of play is about as graceful as a terrier digging for a bone, could beat Bill Tilden every day in the week, but he'd never be a champion, in a real sense. He's too ungraceful.

Take bowling — Well, you go ahead and take it, and while you're at it, take javelin throwing, plunging for distance and intercollegiate wrestling. I'm not interested.

Costs Rassler $100 To Use Blackjack

Birmingham, Ala., March 27 (AP).—It cost a wrestler $100 and an indefinite suspension by the State athletic commission today for attacking his opponent with a blackjack.

Chief Chewchki, Oklahoma Indian, drew the fine and George Zaharias was his opponent last night. In addition, the Chief faces a charge of carrying concealed weapons, April 12 in police court.

The Chief pulled the weapon from his trunks during the contest when they were trying to decide the third and last fall. He began beating Zaharias over the head with it. The referee, Mac Scholder wrested it away from Chewchki and used it to make the Indian break a hold.

Thrillers End A. A. U. Play Tonight

G. W. Frosh, Sleuths to Battle for Unlimited Title in Feature.

CLIMAXING one of the most hectic championships in the seven-year history of the District A. A. U. basket ball tournament sponsored by The Washington Post, George Washington University's high-geared freshman team will battle Trinity for the unlimited crown, and St. Martin's will meet Bovello Plumbers for the 130-pound title tonight at Roosevelt High School gym.

Championships already having been settled in four classes, these four quintets are slated to apply the finishing touches to the annual basket ball pageant in fitting fashion, with the Saints and Plumbers clashing at 8 o'clock, and the fast-flying collegians and Sunday school title holders meeting in the crowning event approximately an hour later.

Record Crowd Foreseen.

Realizing the tremendous interest cooked up in both games, particularly the finale, in which some of the most talented players ever to perform in an A. A. U. event here will disport their wares, tournament officials have made preparations to accommodate the largest turnout of the season.

As an added feature to the "swan-song" ceremonies medals to the winning teams and players will be awarded during the intermission of the G. W.-Trinity tussle. Heurich Flashes, 145-pound winners; Ebel's Grill, 115-pound title holders; Y. M. C. A. Hawks, conquerors in the 100-pound class, and Al's A. C., victor in the girls' unlimited division, are the teams that eagerly await their awards.

A. A. U. tournament followers are going to invade the gymnasium tonight prepared for two blood-tingling battles, such as those that have characterized the games of the past two weeks. That thrill will be piled on thrill when the G. W. Frosh begin operations against the fleet-footed Trinity boys is a foregone conclusion, judging by the sensational battles the two finalists waged with other teams before they forged into the ultimate round.

G. W. Frosh Slight Choices.

On the strength of the 40-to-28 victory Monday night over the heavy favorites, Bureau of Investigation, the Colonial frosh will enter the game installed as slight favorites. It took Roland Logan's aggregation of former prep stars to get warmed up, and when the collegians did there was no stopping

Bill Melhorn Gets 67 for Golf Lead

Armour, Cox, Picard in Tie for Second Place, 2 Strokes Behind.

PINEHURST, N. C., March 27 (AP).—They call him "Wild Bill" Mehlhorn, but the veteran professional was seldom off the line today as he clipped four strokes off par for a 67 to gain the first-round leadership in the thirty-second North and South Open golf tournament.

The husky slugger, who recently changed his address from Brooklyn to Louisville, Ky., posted a card of 35—32—67 for a two-stroke advantage over three of his professional rivals, Tommy Armour, Wiffy Cox and a younger star, Henry Picard, of Charleston, S. C.

11 Equal or Break Par.

Although a high wind blew across the course this morning and rain this afternoon brought further difficulties for some, eleven players returned scores of par 71 or better.

Mehlhorn opened his assault on Old Man Par on the eighth hole, where he sank one from off the sand green for a birdie 4. A fine approach shot 3 feet from the cup brought another birdie on the tenth. Mehlhorn sank putts ranging from 8 to 12 feet on three holes, the twelfth, fifteenth and sixteenth for birdies as he came blazing home in 32, but lost one on the eleventh, where he overshot the green and failed to sink a 3 footer for a par.

Cox Shoots a 32.

Wiffy Cox equaled Mehlhorn's fine 32 on the second nine but he used up 37 blows on the front side. Twice Wiffy's approaches were caught by bunkers and each time he lost a stroke. Cox had three birdies and an eagle, the latter on the sixth, where he holed out from off the sand.

District of Columbia and Virginia competitors did not fare so well. Al Houghton, of Washington, carded 76 to lead the small Capital City contingent. Fred McLeod, also of Washington, turned in a 79; Dick Lunn, an 81; Tom Hudgins, 83, and Dick Wilson, former Georgetown U. student, a 79.

Richmond's Bobby Cruickshank finished in 78 strokes, but Chandler Harper, of Portsmouth, and Benny Loving, Petersburg, Va., bettered this by three strokes. Another Richmond entrant, Ed Baker, negotiated the course in 87, while Dugan Aycock, of Martinsville, Va., came home in 78.

Norfolk Nine to Play 12 Training Contracts

Norfolk, Va., March 27 (Spl.).—Norfolk's Piedmont League baseball team is beginning to assemble here and by next Monday a string of 28 promising young players will be on hand. Bill Skiff, who will manage the Tars, is due tomorrow. The first exhibition game will be played April 7 with a team from the navy yard.

Twelve games are on the training program for the local nine, according to H. P. Dawson, business manager of the club.

April 8, Orioles; 10, 11, Newark, International League Club; 14, 15, Syracuse, International League Club; 17, Norfolk Police; 19, Orioles; 21, Majestics of Washington; 22, Norfolk Police; 23, Navy Yard.

Abel Pilots Black Target to Second Victory in Row at Tropical, Paying $7.70

Colt Records Fast Time Of 1:11

Traffic Judge Second; Style Corner Caught in Final Drive.

Long Shots Triumphant; Merry Bud and O'Neill Return Big Odds.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., March 27 (AP).—Albert "Whitey" Abel, who owns, trains and rides his own small stable of thoroughbreds, guided his 4-year-old Black Target to the colt's second victory in a row in the fourth event here this afternoon. It was the first start for the son of Black Watch since February 15 at Hialeah, when he also won under Abel, and he again proved much the best, beating P. D. Watts' Traffic Judge by two lengths. Mrs. A. G. Marchant's Style Corner lost the place by a half length. The six furlongs distance was covered in the fast time of 1:11 flat. Black Target was the first favorite of the day to score, returning $7.70.

Abel formerly rode for the powerful H. P. Whitney establishment. "Whitey" has been doing very nicely for himself lately. He recently won a race astride his own horse, Tremolo. Black Target apparently has gotten over his bad post behavior, for the broke on top today.

Wins Well in Hand.

Style Corner rushed past the ultimate winner after the start and Abel waited until the far turn to urge Black Target to the front. The colt drew into a wide advantage and won well in hand. Traffic Judge made his bid in the final quarter and caught Style Corner in the final drive.

The first race provided an exciting finish, with Bardstown just lasting to nose out the heavily played and unfortunate Leroline. Superlette Lou overcame trouble after the start to finish third, a head behind, with the tired Dark Fey a close fourth. Bardstown ran Our Senator and Dark Fey into the ground, but Leroline, in tight quarters after the break, closed very fast on the inside and almost got up. The winner paid $10.20.

Merry Bud Scores.

Deadeye Dick was considered a cinch in the juvenile dash and the players bet accordingly, but the veteran Willie Fronk was of no help to the 1-to-3 shot. Merry Bud broke on top in a bad start and was hustled along all the way to win by a length and a half, paying $31.50. The favorite, ridden poorly, somehow managed to take the place by a nose from Migrate. Deadeye Dick was unquestionably the best horse in the race.

Another upset occurred when O'Neill, suddenly snapping out of the lethargy he displayed in recent efforts, took the third purse to pay $44.40. Inflate, which set the pace to the sixteenth pole, was beaten nearly 2 lengths while saving second money by a half length from Gallic. O'Neill gradually improved his position, coming from far back to run over inflate and win easily. Mae Sweep failed to display any speed.

Moralist Is Winner.

Moralist won the fifth, leading High Proof and Primute under the wire in a driving finish. He rewarded his backers with a $14.50 mutuel.

Piety added to the discomfiture of the form players by winning the sixth event and paying $22.60. Distribute was second, 4 lengths back and 5 spans before Off Duty. Kiltamond, the favorite, broke last and stayed there. Her jockey, Corbett, said he lost his stirrups. Piety was rated close to the leaders and easily took command when called upon, drawing far clear in the stretch.

Jimmy Hunter earned a double by booting Bichloride, $6.10, home by a nose over Sky Haven in the closing contest. Fairly Wild was third. Sky Haven had the race won, but the boy "tossed it off" by careless riding right near the finish.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

Strange as it seems, it takes more than three times as much power to push a small speedboat along at top speed than it does to pull a passenger train. Gar Wood's famous 120-mile-an-hour speedboat, the Miss America X, develops 6,800 horsepower at top speed in her motors. A 300-ton locomotive, such as is used on extra-fare passenger trains speeding between New York and Chicago, running at average speed, develops just about a third as much power. Three such locomotives coupled together would measure just a few feet shorter than a football field. Gar Wood's boat is 40 feet long.

The motors in Miss America X are as powerful at top speed as all the motors put together on half a dozen of the new bi-motored transport airplanes which carry 10 passengers and a crew of three through the air at 180 miles an hour. Ninety-nine people can ride through the air nearly 200 miles an hour on as much power as it takes to drive Gar Wood and his crew of one through the water at 120 miles an hour.

The Wood speedboat is powered by a bank of four 12-cylinder motors turning 2,600 revolutions per minute. That means that the cylinders fire at the rate of 62,000 times a minute. In 16 minutes time a million explosions take place in the motors.

Tropical Park, March 27.

Dear Al:

Mike laughed at me when I sat down to pick them one night last week. He laughed because I told him that I had had enough of Moralist. He warned me that if I passed up the horse I would be passing up a winner. I passed him up—and he won. But I caught the rascal today. Yes, sir, they tried to sneak Moralist over on Papa Bennings and we socked in the onions to collect a $14.10 mutuel. Otherwise, the day was a rather nonproductive one as far as Bennings, Inc., was concerned. I had a wire from Mike today. I'll let you read it: "May quit horse racket for engineering stop won a clock, a camera and six cigarette lighters in one of those hoisting machines stop only used 341 nickels stop understand that time of four hours is a record stop." He will be picking up silver paper if he doesn't pick me some winners next week. BILL.

First race—Beginner's Bait turned in a neat second last out and needs only to run his race to get out of the maiden ranks. St. Moritz drew heavy money last week but failed. Likely to beat Synod out of the place award tomorrow.

Second race—Candy Prince is regarded as a promising youngster. Clocker Mike had a circle around this one in his trial book. Looks like the spot. Overstimulate for the place and Spec to take care of the others.

Third race—Levaal has been working as if he means business in this sprint. The weights are mostly alike and I believe this one will be a profitable investment. Singing Heart, habitual second, may end up in the place hole again. Ondott is a sleeper with a chance.

Fourth race—Happy Scott gets the Bennings call over this crew. Transeo turned back a fair lot last out and will be the one to beat here. Don't Blush, with a shift in riders, will be ready if the top pair lose their grip.

Fifth race—Sabula gets in here with only 103 pounds, and this way rigged should scamper to the pay-off line ahead of Fire Mask and My Purchase. Khorasan and Sea Fox are possible "wake-up" horses.

Sixth race—I'm going to give Merrie Marie another chance. This is a speedy 3-year-old. Patrice Runyon and Bert Lahr for the place and show awards.

Bets Life of Turf, New Yorkers Told

Hearing Is Held on Three Major Measures.

Albany, N. Y., March 27 (AP).—Turf leaders told the Legislature today that racing in the Empire State, home of seven tracks, will "languish and die" unless betting is legalized.

Their appeal for abandonment of the State's 28-year-old antibetting laws produced a blunt retort from the Rev. O. R. Miller, superintendent of the New York State Civic League.

A legislative hearing was held on three major racing measures: The Dunnigan bill to divide control of racing between the Jockey Club and a new racing commission; the Crawford-Breitenbach bill to repeal the Hughes antibetting laws of 1906, and the Twomey resolution for a constitutional amendment to permit parimutuel betting.

"Unless something is done immediately about betting, the sport will languish and die," declared Robert Cumming, spokesman for the Jockey Club. "A great industry will be destroyed."

Terps Weak in Field Events.

Though Maryland's track team is coming along rapidly and will provide keen competition for opponents, Coach Geary Eppley is far from satisfied with the field events situation wherein the team is weakest.

them. They walloped Sigma Alpha Kappa and were given an unexpectedly tight game by Congress Heights, but the full fury of the Freshmen's attack was not reached until Investigation came in the way. Led by Gen Golfaden and Everett Russell, the former Tech flash, and aided and abetted by Gerald Whitley, center, and Clarence Berg and Ed Yarborough, guards, the Colonials passed and shot the Sleuths simply dizzy after they (G. W.) took a 20-to-15 lead at the turn.

Trinity Five Confident.

Trinity, easy winner over Miller Furniture Co. and Rockville and conqueror of the Boys Club of Washington, the latter by a 33-30 score, is confident of stopping the vaunted G. W. passing and shooting attack. Capt. Bob Lyles, who usually doesn't start himself, although he is one of the most dependable guards in the District, is pinning his hopes on Burdette Cogar and Tom Peck, forwards; Big Bill Roberts, center; Waverly Wheeler and Knocky Thomas, guards. Cogar and Wheeler were stars of the Emerson Institute team, while the rock-steady Thomas was outstanding on the Maryland freshman team this season.

Both St. Martin's and Bovello will be sporting enviable records when they clash. Bovello has won its last 20 games, and the Saints have won equally as many. Wiles, Connolly, Vincent, Boyle, Farrell and Ey will probably make up the Saints' starting line-up, while Kadis, Vermillion, Colbert, Mathias and Hartnett may start off for the Plumbers.

Team Joins League.

Mount Savage, Md., March 27 (Spl.).—Arthur Brant, secretary of the Potomac Valley Baseball League, announced that the Junior Order Council of Mount Savage will sponsor a team in his circuit this year and that the loop will operate with eight teams as it did in 1933. The eighth entry, Mount Savage, will be managed by Joseph Crane. Francis Best is president of the club.

returns to the Cleveland pitching staff every spring and goes back to the minors every summer, but, after the first inning, the Nats retired from the game offensively speaking. They crowded four hits into the opening session and totaled eight hits for the day, while Cleveland socked Crowder for seven hits in three innings and was held to two blows over the remainder of the route by Walter Stewart and Monte Weaver, who finished out the string.

Johnny Stone, the hero of the Nats' spring games thus far, distinguished himself again today with a pair of legitimate two-base hits, driving in the first run following Buddy Myer's single. Manush got a wind-blown single into right and the Nats ended up with three runs for the inning when Second Baseman Eddie Moore dropped Willie Kamm's perfect double-play throw on Cronin's grounder.

After his first inning mishap, Moore redeemed himself with some sensational fielding during the rest of the game and may be the answer to the Indians' prayer for a second baseman. They borrowed him for the afternoon from among their New Orleans farm hands.

The Injuns got back a pair of runs in the first inning when Big Nick Trosky's single followed a pop single by Porter and a fluke double by Averill that started for the right field fence and ended near first base in the face of the wind. Porter drove in the tying run with a single in the second and the wind did Crowder wrong again in the third when Vosmik's double emerged from a harmless looking pop to center.

And with Hudlin out there pulling some mid-season pitching on the boys, the Nats surrendered without further violence.

Ceylon Spurts to Win Epsom Downs Feature

Houston, Tex., March 27 (AP).—Ceylon, a son of Chance Shot from Mrs. L. M. Pike's stable, came from behind in the stretch to score in a driving finish in the mile feature of an ordinary card at Epsom Downs today.

Taking command at the head of the stretch, the 3-year-old colt finished a half-length in front of forceful and eight others of his age. Fast Move, strongly backed by reason of a victory the last time out, was third.

Fast Move was the first away from the barrier and held command until Jockey Harbort shot Ceylon to the front. Forceful was close all the way but was unable to quite match Ceylon's speed in the stretch.

The winner, paying $13.30, ran the distance over a slow track in 1:42 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BARDSTOWN, $10.20, $3.80, $2.90; LEROLINE, $3.30, $2.70; SUPERLETTE LOU, $6.10.

BARDSTOWN, a thoroughly-fit horse, broke fast, raced all opposition into submission, tired, but stood long drive gamely. LEROLINE broke fast, but was crowded back, finished with a rush, and would have won in another stride. SUPERLETTE LOU, away in a tangle, closed a big gap and was a fast going third. DARK FEY followed pace closely, but weakened in last 20 yards. TIGHT WAD ran a fair race.

SECOND RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming prices, $2,250 to $1,250. For 2-year-olds. Start bad. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:48½. Off at 2:50½. Winner, W. P. Phelan's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MERRY BUD, $31.50, $4.70, $3.90; DEADEYE DICK, $2.50, $2.30; MIGRATE, $2.80.

MERRY BUD got the break, opened wide lead, and hard ridden the final furlong held race safe. DEADEYE DICK was miserably ridden. He was awash in a tangle, was messed about all during the running, allowed to go wide entering stretch, and was weakly ridden at end. MIGRATE, on the outside all the way, ran good race. HAPPY HELEN broke slow, worked her way up, and finished gamely. LITTLE CYNIC stopped badly. MICKEY'S MAN was left.

THIRD RACE—One mile. Purse, $700; claiming price, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:26. Off at 3:28. Winner, C. Y. Whitney's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—O'NEILL, $44.40, $19.20, $7.20; INFLATE, $4.90, $3.00; GALLIC, $2.70.

O'NEILL, showing remarkable improvement, made up ground gradually in run down back stretch, closed very fast in last quarter mile, and won going away. INFLATE, under light weight, raced GRANNY'S TRADE into defeat, but weakened at end. GALLIC, away in a tangle, moved up fast, but stopped badly. GRANNY'S TRADE was used up trying to make INFLATE stop. SHAKER MAID closed a big gap. MAE SWEEP and SUSPICIOUS were both outrun.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, 700; claiming prices, $1,500 to $1,200. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:58½. Off at 3:58½. Winner, A. Stock Market Dips Sharply On Control Step President's Backing of Strict Regulation Sends Gloom Into Street.

New York, March 27 (AP).—President Roosevelt's assertion that the Fletcher-Rayburn bill could not safely be weakened, brought an unhappy moment to the stock market today.

Prices of stocks, and the price of stock exchange memberships, dipped sharply for a time in the morning, but Wall street quickly decided that gloom was being carried to extremes, and prices recovered moderately during the afternoon.

It was recalled that prices had rallied when the revised Fletcher-Rayburn bill was published, but in the last few days brokers had evidently been hoping for further revisions.

$1 to $4 Declines.

Shares declined $1 to $4 a share in many instances in a flurry of selling in the first half hour which put the ticker as much as five minutes behind the market, but selling quickly subsided, and prices recovered as much as $1 or so in several issues in dull trading during the remainder of the session. Sales increased, reaching approximately 1,600,000 shares.

Three stock exchange memberships were sold, the first at $100,000, the second at $85,000 and the third at $3,000 during the morning. In the afternoon, however, there was a fourth transfer at $100,000, or back at the top price of the morning. Yesterday there had been a transfer at $112,000.

Seats fell as low as $68,000 in 1932, and, with the exception of that year, today's low price was the lowest in a decade. The peak was $625,000, touched in 1929, but that included a right to one-fourth of a new seat, reflecting the increase in memberships that year.

Gloom in Street.

Gloom seemed deepest in Wall street among specialists and professional traders, who feel that the bill will greatly curtail their activities. The names of the sellers of the Stock Exchange seats were not made public, but it was understood that some of the day's sellers were specialists.

Commission houses were rather glum, feeling that the amount of public participation in the markets would be greatly curtailed. Nevertheless, this opinion was not unanimous, some expressing the view that Federal control would restore public confidence in the market and tend to increase participation of an investment character.

President Roosevelt, in his letter to the chairmen of the Senate and House committees considering the bill, left no doubt as to the desire of the Administration to curtail the volume of speculation. The President called for margins "so high that speculation, even as it exists today, will, of necessity, be drastically curtailed."

Street Concedes Bill.

Most quarters in Wall street appeared reconciled to the prospect that with the President's backing the Fletcher-Rayburn bill would probably be enacted in virtually its present form. It had been lack of comment from the White House on that specific control measure that had buoyed hopes of further revision.

The more definite prospect of regulation overshadowed all other news in Wall street, although wage increases attracted some attention. Ten per cent boosts by Corrigan McKinney Steel, Wheeling Steel and American Rolling Mill were understood to be forerunners of similar action by several other steel companies.

In the stock exchange, the bond market dipped moderately, but held up relatively better than stocks. Measured by price averages, stocks had their sharpest setback in little more than a month, which reduced the general level to that of mid-January.

Closing prices of some active issues follow: American Can, $96, off $3; American Telephone, $117.62, off $2.12; Chrysler, $51.12, off $2.75; General Electric, $20.75, off $1; General Motors, $36.62, off $1.37; Montgomery Ward, $30.62, off $1.37; Nash Motor, $25.12, off $1.87; National Steel, $45.50, off $2.75; New York Central, $34.74, off $1.62; Standard Oil of N. J., $44.50, off 62 cents; Union Pacific, $123, off $2; U. S. Steel, $49.87, off $1.87.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Agreement Between Automobile Manufacturers and Labor, While a Major Accomplishment, Can Not Be Regarded as Definitive Solution.

By Ralph West Robey.

Nothing could be much more encouraging from the point of view of the business outlook than a conviction that labor troubles of the type we have just witnessed in the automobile industry are at an end. In other words, if we could accept this so-called solution as definitive it would be possible to breathe a sign of relief and turn to other factors in the recovery drive. Unfortunately, however, there is little that would justify such an optimistic interpretation of the current action. There are several points in this settlement that at least will tend to breed later difficulties.

First is the question of unionization. It will be remembered that the whole dispute was whether the American Federation of Labor should be permitted to organize the automobile industry. This meant from its point of view the elimination of company unions. Its argument was that such company unions did not reflect the will of the employes and, consequently, constituted a violation of Section 7a of the NRA.

In the settlement, the American Federation of Labor loses on this point. Company unions will have the same standing as always. The employers merely agree "to bargain collectively with the freely chosen representative of groups" and further, that "if there be more than one group each bargaining committee shall have a total membership pro rata to the number of men each member represents."

Under these terms the American Federation of Labor can not dominate the industry unless it gets virtually 100 per cent membership. If it is able to obtain only 20 per cent of the employes its weight in making demands will be limited to this proportion. Such a solution necessarily will be displeasing to the American Federation of Labor officers. They do not like to work side by side with other labor organizations. On this point, therefore, there is a possibility of continued irritation and trouble of the first rank.

A second potential cause of difficulty is to be found in the board for which the settlement provides. This is to consist of three members; one representing labor, one representing the employers and one a neutral. Almost certainly the labor representative will be unsatisfactory to a greater or lesser extent. If he is an A. F. of L. man the rest of the employes will not like him and constantly will be on the watch to see if he is not using his position to further the interest of this National labor organization. On the other hand, if he is an A. F. of L. man he will not enjoy the favor of the organiztaion and unless it changes its tactics will be the object of constant sniping.

Labor Union Discrimination a Sore Spot.

The third great point in the settlement, namely, that there shall be no discrimination against employes because of their labor affiliations, also will be a sore spot, but this will not be peculiar to the solution. Such a rule never can be enforced to the satisfaction of all parties concerned. This is because it assumes a unanimity of opinion as to the value and efficiency of a particular employe that does not exist in actual practice.

It seems to me, therefore, there is comparatively little question that in due time further dissatisfaction will arise in the automobile labor field. What we have accomplished is simply the postponement of difficulties. I do not mean by this to belittle the solution. It reflects real leadership on the part of the President. Nevertheless, I can not help but feel it would be a grave error to turn our backs on the fact that the American Federation of Labor, an organization that is fighting for its existence, has been defeated in this immediate struggle and that it will try to find other avenues by which to strengthen its position.

Federal Bonds Score Rises; Others Drop

General Market Averages 3-10 Down; Trading, $10,973,000.

New York, March 27 (AP).—While U. S. Government securities displayed quiet strength in today's bond market, other listed loans followed an irregularly lower trend.

The activity was slightly under that of yesterday, transfers totaling only $10,973,00 par value. The average for 60 domestic corporate issues was off three-tenths of a point at 84.8.

The principal declines were in the secondary groups which reflected the heaviness of stocks and commodities. There were some outstanding gains, due to special influences.

Federal Section Advances.

The Federal section finished with advances of 1-32d to 7-32ds of a point. At the same time it was announced that the Treasury last week had purchased for the sinking fund and other accounts some $37,000,000 of its own bonds.

Most of the rails were off fractionally to around 2 points, but there were exceptions. Denver & Rio Grande loans held advances of 1 to 4 points on announcement that half the interest on the general mortgage 5s, due February 1, would be paid, and that other April 1 interest payments would be met.

Western Pacific first 5s also recovered 2¼ points. A single El Paso & Southwestern 5 per cent bond sold for the first time in two years at a gain of 20½ points. Some bonds of Santa Fe, Chesapeake & Ohio, Norfolk & Western and a few others were either unchanged or slightly higher.

Utilities and Industrials.

Moderate recessions ruled among the utilities and industrials, but there were a number of scattered rallies.

Federal Light & Traction 5s got up 3 points and gains of fractions to a point or more were held by some loans of American Telephone, American Smelting, Bethlehem Steel, Goodyear, Inland Steel and Western Union.

Led by the Young plan 5½s and Dawes Plan 7s, German obligations rallied after early weakness. The two government issues came back about 4 points from their lows to end with net gains of 1¾ to 2¾ points, respectively. Although Dutch East Indies 6s gained 3½ points, mild irregularities predominated elsewhere in the foreign section.

Curb's Prices Sink to Lower Levels at Close

New York, March 27 (AP).—The curb list rested at a lower level at the end of today's session. Alcohol's, specialties and some of the oils and metals suffered major recessions. Utilities lost fractions to around a point.

Unfavorable reaction in brokerage circles to the Administration's proposal to adhere to strict exchange regulation prompted a volume of selling at the opening. Leading issues declined 1 to around 3 points.

A mild recovery in the late trading lifted prices moderately from their lows. Natomas Co. lost 4 points and issues finishing 1 to 2 or more lower included Aluminum Co. of America, American Gas & Electric, Celluloid Corporation, Fisk Rubber, Novadel Agene, J. J. Newberry, Newmont, Mead Johnson, Hiram Walker, Canadian Industrial Alcohol B, Gulf Oil, Standard Oil of Indiana, Swift International and Waco Aircraft. Electric Bond and Share yielded fractionally.

Transfers approximated 305,000 shares, compared with 246,000 yesterday.

Cotton Prices Follow Other Markets Down

May Closes at 11.86 as General Offerings Drop 8 to 13 Points.

New York, March 27 (AP).—Cotton was heavy today in sympathy with other markets which felt nervousness over the legislative outlook. Midafternoon recoveries of $1 per bale from the lows were short lived, with the market reacting in the late trading under renewed pressure of liquidation.

July contracts, which had rallied from 11.93 to 12.13, closed at 12.00, with the general market finishing steady, at net losses of 8 to 13 points.

Initial prices were 7 to 9 points lower under selling by wire houses, Europe and the South despite relatively steady Liverpool cables. Demand was limited to trade price fixing on a scale down.

By late morning the market had sold off 16 to 17 points with May declining to 11.82 and December to 12.07. At these levels a fair amount of buying in the May and July positions credited to Japanese account absorbed offerings and attracted a little local covering.

Washington reports indicating that the Senate had accepted amendments to the Bankhead cotton control bill increasing the tax on production in excess of quotas to 75 per cent of the average market price and making the tax collectible at the time of ginning brought in some local and commission house buying. May rallied to 12.01 and October to 12.27, or about 2 to 4 points net higher and 19 to 20 points above the lows. Increased selling reappeared, however, with final prices 11 to 15 points under the highs.

Hesitancy of buyers to follow the rally was attributed to a disposition to await the Senate vote on the Bankhead bill, and also because of continued heaviness of outside markets.

Exports today, 32,096, making 6,100,311 so far this season. Port receipts, 15,459. U. S. port stocks, 3,154,692.

22 Countries Sell Liquors To America

Twenty-two countries participated in the United States import trade in whiskey during February, figures compiled in the Commerce Department's division of foreign trade statistics show.

The United Kingdom and Canada together accounted for 90 per cent of the 410,730 gallons received from abroad in that month. According to official records, Miquelon and St. Pierre Island ranked as the third largest supplier, accounting for nearly 20,000 gallons. The Irish Free State followed with 5,079 gallons; Cuba contributed 4,173 gallons; Bermudas, 3,748 gallons; France, 2,310 gallons, and Belgium, 1,861 gallons.

The amounts of whisky credited to the remaining 14 supplying countries ranged from 3 gallons shipped by Italy to 781 gallons originating in Denmark. Japan, China, Mexico and Germany also supplied small quantities of whisky during February.

The approximate 17,000 gallons of gin imported during February originated in 11 foreign countries, with the United Kingdom and Holland accounting for 95 per cent. Shipments from the 9 other supplying countries ranged from 158 gallons from Canada to 18 gallons from Peru and 3 gallons from Italy.

Thirty-three countries are recorded as suppliers of "other spirits, cordials, &c.," during February.

Labor-Saving Machines Seen As NRA Reply

Industrial Chiefs Reported Making Plans to Meet New Deal Demands.

By Claude A. Jagger.

New York, March 27 (AP).—Machines rather than men,

Will this be industry's answer to the recovery drive for shorter hours and higher wages?

Few business analysts think it can be more than a partial answer, and point out that any spur given to machinery manufacture and plant modernization would in itself expand employment.

Nevertheless, industry's past efforts to reduce labor costs with machinery prompted Standard Statistics Co. to have its field investigators inquire as to present plans.

Labor-Saving Equipment.

While no wide canvass was made, it was found that many industrial managers "already are laying plans for installation of additional labor-saving equipment." In several instances it was found that "industrial concerns have determined upon a policy of adding machines, rather than putting on more shifts."

The effect upon employment of automatic machinery, widely introduced in the last few years, has been much discussed, particularly since the publicity given the problem by Howard Scott and "technocracy."

At various times in the course of industrial development, workers have revolted against the machine, even in the early days of automatic harvesting machinery, farmers sometimes had to protect their machines from sabotage by disgruntled farm hands.

New Industrial Development.

But the answer of most economists to the problem today is that as more labor-saving machinery is installed, new industries must be developed, or work hours must be further shortened and wages increased, so that consumption can keep up with production.

In the course of the current depresson, suggestions to curtail use of the machine have been heard. In Germany, the Hitler government actually made a start in that direction some months ago.

However, ideas of forestalling industrial progress have not been popular, and should it appear that higher labor costs are bringing much more automatic machinery into use, industrialists may well find themselves faced with further demands for shortening of hours and raising wage rates.

Capital Goods Outlook.

In fact, Washington is giving serious consideration of measures to stimulate the Capital goods industry, a chief division which comprises the makers of manufacturing machinery and equipment.

Most of the current unemployment is in the capital goods lines, and moves have been discussed to encourage manufacturers to renovate their plants. The proposed Federal intermediate credit banks are designed to help the small manufacturer with this and other problems.

If it appears later on that this movement has prompted such additional installation of labor-saving machinery that the reemployment program is being defeated, that bridge will presumably be crossed when it is reached.

Roads to Quit 216 Miles of Steel Rails

I. C. C. Authorizes Companies to Abandon Lines in Several States.

(Associated Press.)

Five railroads were authorized by the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday to abandon a total of 216 miles of railroad.

The Missouri Pacific Railroad was authorized to abandon 137 miles; the St. Louis-San Francisco, 18 miles; the Minarets and Western, 54 miles; the Western Maryland, 2 miles, and the Louisville and Nashville 5 miles.

The Missouri Pacific was authorized to abandon its branch line from Fort Scott to Lomax, Kans., a distance of 90.5 miles, and also its branch from Mound City to Leroy, 46.8 miles.

The receivers for the St. Louis-San Francisco were authorized to abandon the Evadale branch from Deckerville, Ark., to Evadale Junction, Ark., 18 miles.

The Minarets and Western was authorized to abandon its line from Pinedale to Pinedale Junction, Calif., 4.5 miles, and 39 miles between Friant and Wishon, Calif. It also was authorized to abandon operation over the track of the Southern Pacific Railroad Co. from Pinedale Junction to Friant, a distance of 10 miles.

The Louisville and Nashville was authorized to abandon 5 miles of line from Redding to Readers, Ala.

In each instance the reason for abandonment was lack of traffic.

Visible Supply Of U. S. Wheat Is Shrinking

Chicago, March 27 (AP).—Bizarre as the idea may sound, the visible supply of American wheat is losing its visibility.

This can best be realized by reading official figures, which show that the supply in sight at present is 45,000,000 bushels less than a year ago.

It is necessary to go back five years to reach a time when Uncle Sam had a smaller amount readily available for manufacture into flour. That time was July, 1929.

The shrinkage of the visible supply attracted much attention recently when it dropped to below 100,000,000 bushels. Magical significance attaches to such a figure—almost as much so as to the farmers' old ideal of a dollar a bushel for wheat. Consequently, eyebrows lifted at the news that the visible supply has now fallen to 95,000,000 bushels.

Further decreases are expected. Primary arrivals of wheat from rural sources show persistent curtailment, as compared with a year ago. An incidental factor is that much of the exportable surplus has been disposed of through sales of Pacific Coast wheat to the Orient.

A new decrease was foreseen in figures expected this afternoon. The latest domestic visible supply total was 94,908,000 bushels, compared with 139,073,000 bushels one year ago. A decrease of 2,184,000 bushels was announced last week. Two weeks ago, there was a falling off of 3,548,000 bushels. Flour stocks in the United States are believed to be moderate, suggesting more active buying of flour with any quickening of the wheat trade.

U. S. Imports Of Quinine Rise Sharply in '33

The Netherlands East Indies government has just announced that it will take up shortly the matter of further restricting the production of cinchona bark, the source of quinine, according to a report to the chemical division from Trade Comcissioner Charles E. Brookhart, Batavia, Java.

The cinchona tree indigenous to South America was introduced into Java about 1854.

Quinine sulphate, the white powder familiar to all who have suffered from malaria, made up the bulk of American quinine imports in 1933. Imports of quinine and derivatives in that year reached the high value of $913,000, compared with $247,700 for 1932 and the quantity rose from 782,670 to 2,906,000 ounces. Sulphate receipts in 1933 were valued at $557,870, compared with $153,637 in the preceding year. This large increase is not accounted for by lower prices as the invoice value increased only 1 cent per ounce to 34 cents, compared with 1932.

United States imports of cinchona bark, the raw material from which quinine is extracted, likewise increased from 1,138,680 to 1,611,890 pounds and from $358,300 to $509,000 in value. The invoice value remained at about 31½ cents per pound.

While Java is the source of about nine-tenths of the world's supply of quinine the bulk of our imports comes direct from the Netherlands where cinchona bark is processed into its various forms. Smaller quantities come from Switzerland, Soviet Russia and England. Ecuador likewise supplies us annually with small quantities of cinchona bark.

Wool Market.

Boston, March 27 (A.P.).—(U. S. Dept. of Agriculture).—Inquiries were received on 64s and finer territory wools, and very moderate quantities were sold occasionally. While prices on these wools were not definitely lower, sales were inclined to the low side of recent quotation ranges. Ohio and similar fleeces of 48s, 50s, quarter-blood grades were quiet, and there was an easy tone in the market for these lines, with 40 cents in the grease being the price at which these wools were offered by most holders.

Rubber Closes Steady.

New York, March 27 (A.P.).—Crude rubber futures closed steady, 8 to 12 lower. May, 10.91; July, 11.20@11.21; September, 11.47@11.48; October, 11.39, nominal. Smoked ribbed spot closed 10.75, nominal.

Farm Product Prices Change Little During Middle of March

Many Small Declines Marked Trading; Settlement of Labor Disputes Curbs Further Drops; Supplies Increase as Demand Is Fairly Active.

(U. S. Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Economics.)

Price changes in farm products since the middle of the month have been rather small, including many slight declines. Underlying position was strengthened by reported settlement of important labor disputes.

Supplies of some products are increasing at this season, and demand is no more than fairly active. Grain and feed markets show moderate firmness at a level below the highest of the year. Prices of spot cotton show little net change.

Live stock markets are irregular and shifting with the volume of supplies from day to day. Hides and wool sell near recent price levels. Dairy and poultry products show the usual spring decline under increasing production. Fruits and vegetables have shown more losses than gains, following the heavier shipments of recent weeks. Potato markets are still unsettled after recent sharp declines. Orchard fruits hold values much better than most of the truck products. Apple markets continue firm in late March.

Cotton Position Slightly Weaker.

Average price of spot cotton showed a little net change during the third week of March. Prices shifted according to strike news and progress of measures to control production.

Cotton markets showed a slight decrease in activity. Offerings of spot cotton in the country markets located in the Southern mill districts, which recently have been rather free, were reported as largely withdrawn since the recent decline in prices.

Cloth markets also were reported less active and prices of some goods slightly lower. There is no indication of a decline in retail sales of drygoods. Finished goods sales were seasonably more active. Actual ginnings of cotton to March 20 were only slightly below the December production estimate. Experts showed considerable increase over the corresponding time a year ago with the result that total exports to March 23 amounting to 5,936,000 bales, were only 36,000 bales less than for the corresponding period a year ago.

Grain Trade Dull.

The general wheat situation remained dull with no important developments after the middle of March. New crop prospects and movement of old crop grain are now leading market influences. Condition of winter wheat is only fair in the Ohio Valley, Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas and mostly poor in the North Central States, but still excellent in the Pacific Northwest. Domestic cash wheat markets held steady to firm and the moderate offerings are moving readily to mills and elevators.

Soft winter wheat was relatively firmer than hard winter. Rye markets developed some independent strength influenced by very light marketings and a fairly active inquiry from mills. Corn markets held fully steady with fairly active demand from shippers and industrial buyers. Premiums on old crop grain increased. Oats markets held practically unchanged. Barley markets were rather unsettled.

The feed markets continued firm during the third week of March. Further advance in wheatfeeds was the principal strengthening influence. The approach of pasture season tended to reduce feeder demand. High protein feeds were barely steady in price, despite light offerings, while corn feeds held about unchanged. Inquiry for gluten and hominy feeds was moderate, but firmness in the corn market was a strengthening influence. Offerings of soybean meal and beet pulp were light and prices steady. Tankage was slightly weaker, but alfalfa meal, distillers' and brewers' grains were held about unchanged.

Live Stock Supplies Decrease.

Receipts of live stock at 11 Midwestern markets were generally smaller after the middle of March. Calves alone showed a small gain. Compared with a year ago receipts of cattle and calves were larger, while hog receipts were smaller and sheep and lambs much smaller. All grades of heavy steers sold rather actively in late March, despite the comparatively narrow shipper demand. Demand for meaty feeders and well-bred thin stocks showed modest expansion, but buying has not been broad. Hog prices at Chicago were under pressure, due to a dull demand attributed mainly to the slow and weak to lower fresh pork market, but prices did not change much.

Quality of the run was plain, choice kinds being relatively scarce and very few loads which would grade prime being included. The average cost at Chicago the third week of March was $4.25, compared with $4.35 for the week before and $4.01 a year ago. Despite reduced receipts, fat lamb values had a slightly downward trend. The top stood at $9.50, later $9.35. Receipts of spring lambs from California and Arizona increased, but the volume was hardly sufficient to have any material effect on the fed-lamb market.

The Eastern wool markets were practically at a standstill and few sales of any sizable volume were closed. Unsettled labor conditions in several major industries had a detrimental influence on the wool markets, and wool buyers were more hesitant than at any time since January, but prices were unchanged. Practically nothing was done on fleece wools. The volume of trade in territory and other Western-grown wools was materially lighter. Sales of mohair slackened, but price quotations were unchanged.

C. & O. Line Loadings Drop to 29,722 Cars

New York, March 27 (AP).—Chesapeake & Ohio Railway handled 29,722 cars of freight last week compared with 31,018 the week before and 19,900 a year ago.

Arts Seeking Other Metals as Gold Mounts

Platinum and Related Minerals Favored by Industries.

Toronto, Ont., March 27 (AP).—Difficulties in getting gold for use in industry and the arts has improved the position of platinum and its associated metals, Robert C. Stanley, president of the International Nickel Co. of Canada, told the annual stockholders' meeting today.

"Throughout the depression," he said, "your company's operations have maintained Canada as second only to Russia in the production of platinum and first in the production of palladium.

"Due to the general business improvement, and to the special impetus given to platinum by the difficulties of getting gold for use in industry and the arts, prices have strengthened and stocks have been reduced."

He said the position as a low cost producer occupied by the company insured profitable disposal of its metal output "whatever the price situation."

After reviewing the financial condition of the company which earned $9,662,583 after charges and reserves for depletion in 1933, Mr. Stanley told the shareholders that "the large and growing item of taxation" was a source of concern to the management.

"This preponderant overhead charge," he said, "amounted to 1½ per cent of the net profits shown on the company's profit and loss statement and the appalling fact is that this drain on earnings is growing rapidly."

He said the company employed 3,643 more workers on December 31 than were on the pay roll at the end of the previous year as a result of increased demand for products of the company.

Italy's Sugar Beet Industry Is Improving

Producers Agree to Buy 2,000,000 Tons of Output in '34.

Improvement in the position of Italy's sugar industry has resulted in sugar producers agreeing to increase the tonnage of beets they will accept in the coming sguar year 1934-35, according to advices to the Commerce Department from Trade Commissioner E. Humes, Rome.

During the sugar year 1933-34, the report shows, Italian sugar producers agree to take 2,000,000 tons of beets based on an acreage of about 79,000 hectares. The actual 1933 acreage was 81,614 hectares and the crop 2,146,160 tons. The sugar mills purchased about 50,000 tons more beets than they had contracted for and the balance was used for cattle feed.

Under the new contracts recently signed the Sugar Producers Consortium will purchase 2,100,000 tons of sugar beets and the few mills not in the consortium will absorb 65,000 tons. Based on a normal crop this tonnage would cover an acreage of about 85,000 hectares.

In 1932, the report points out, the Italian sugar industry found itself with an accumulation of sugar stocks amounting to 40 per cent of the annual consumption of the country. Because of this situation restrictions on acreage grown to sugar beets were seen to be inadequate. In 1933, therefore, restrictions were enforced through advance contracts between the beet growers and the sugar mills on the total tonnage of sugar beets which the mills would accept.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY No Amateurs Need Apply By Harry J. Tuthill

WELL JO, I SPOKE TO OLD HERMAN ABOUT YOUR IDEA OF CALLING THE POLICE AND HE AGREED TO GIVE THEM ANY HELP OR ADVICE THEY NEED.
WHAT! HIM? A MAN WHO DOESN'T EVEN KNOW THE TRAFFIC RULES, ADVISING THE WHOLE POLICE DEPARTMENT?
ANYONE WHO CONCENTRATES ON DEDUCTIONS IS BOUND TO LEAVE HIS CAR IN FRONT OF A FIRE PLUG NOW AND THEN.
I WISH I HAD HIS ABILITY. HE HAS TESTIMONIALS IN BLACK ON WHITE FROM PLENTY OF MAIL-ORDER DETECTIVE SCHOOLS.
HIS WIFE SAYS HE GOT A LOT OF THOSE DIPLOMAS BECAUSE THE INSTRUCTORS COULDN'T THINK OF ANY OTHER WAY TO GET RID OF HIM.
HE CAN READ FINGER PRINTS IN FIVE DIFFERENT LANGUAGES, ALSO.....
WELL ANYHOW, I'M NOT GOING TO HAVE ANY AMATEUR DETECTIVE PRACTICING ON OUR TROUBLES. WE.... THERE'S OUR BELL NOW! IT'S THE POLICE.

Walt Mason, Himself

Balmy Peace.

Now Europe hears the clanging of sabers every day, and there is much haranguing, all in the good old way. No nation wants a battle, no country wants a scrap, and yet the sabers rattle all over Europe's map. "We'd see the nations peaceful," the statesmen all opine, "we have a large valise full of olive branches fine. We're surely not forgetting the war that sheared our fleece; we've just put down a setting of eggs from doves of peace. But some are throwing boulders, and some are throwing mud, with chips upon their shoulders they show they're out for blood. And while for peace we're yearning, and dread the battle's shock, we're righteous in returning a brickbat or a rock." And to the sad bystander it seems an evil thing that nations over yonder can't dance and smile and sing; since all of them are longing for peace, and naught beside, why are their soldiers thronging, why is sweet peace denied? Each nation is so mellow, with love throned on its brow; it is the other fellow who kicks up all the row. Each one would rather suffer than let the war dogs loose; it is the other duffer who ought to have a noose. And so the Sabbath quiet of Europe's in decay; there is a little riot or swatfest every day. The bruiser and the striker pervade the weary land, and 'tis the other piker who always should be canned.

Noted Leaders Chosen Judges Of Post Essays

Divisions 25-64 in Contest to Be Graded April 9-15 by Select Board.

Original essays on challenging Governmental topics, soon to be submitted by high school finals winners in Divisions 25 through 64 of The Washington Post Scholarship Competition, will be judged between April 9 and 15, by the following board of local educators, under the chairmanship of The Post's editor in chief, Felix Morley:

Dr. George B. Woods, dean of the college of liberal arts of American University; Dr. Thomas H. Healy, assistant dean of the school of foreign service of Georgetown University; Joseph M. Murphy, director of the bureau of public relations of the Catholic University of America, and W. S. Deffenbaugh, chief of the American schools division of the United States Office of Education.

Dr. Charles H. Wesley, director of the history department of Howard University, will head a special committee of Howard faculty members to select winners in Divisions 64 through 69. Winners of eliminations in Divisions 1 to 25 will be determined by April 13 within Washington's eight public senior high schools by judges to be named by the principals for their respective school finals.

The essays, which are now being polished up in classrooms for school finals honors, will be judged in the division eliminations on the following points, stipulated in the competition's rule booklet:

Each division winner, who will have defeated an approximate total of 96 individual contestants, will receive a silver medal from The Post and will automatically progress into the project's finals on the campus of his or her choice from among the sponsoring universities. These finals, to be held between May 1 and 15, will be based on oral and written examinations and will single out the winners of the five four-year tuition scholarships offered as major prizes by American, Catholic, Georgetown and Howard Universities.

The five men selected for the bulk of the essay judging are highly equipped to make the important decisions which will carry admission into final contests for the scholarships.

Mr. Morley Highly Trained.

Mr. Morley was himself, on graduating from Haverford College in 1915, a successful candidate for a Rhodes scholarship, and thereby received an A. B. from Oxford College, England, in 1921 and a Hutchinson research fellowship the following year at the London School of Economics and Political Science. He has served in the newspaper world as a reporter on the Philadelphia Public Ledger, as correspondent for press associations in Washington and later as a staff editor of the Baltimore Sun, for which paper he served as Far Eastern and Geneva correspondent.

He has lectured on current political problems, for several years was director of the Geneva office of the League of Nations Association of the United States, and prior to his appointment as editor in chief of The Post was a member of the staff of the Brookings Institution here. He is author of "Unemployment Relief in Great Britain," "Our Far Eastern Assignment" and "The Constitutional Development of the League of Nations."

Dr. Healy Long Teacher.

Dr. Healy, a native of Washington, has earned three degrees from Georgetown, two of them cum laude, and has engaged in extensive graduate studies at the Academy of International Law at the Hague, Holland. He has been a member of both the faculty and official staff of Georgetown's School of Foreign Service since 1920, being now professor of international law and foreign relations there. At both the Academy of International Law in the Hague and the American section of L'Institute de Droit Internationale, he has served as professor of international law.

In 1929 he was a delegate of the United States to the International Congress on Commercial Education at Amsterdam. He is an active member of a number of National and international political science organizations and has written, in French, several books dealing with these subjects.

Dr. Woods Harvard Graduate.

Dr. Woods is a graduate of Northwestern and Harvard Universities. He has specialized in English and public speaking instruction, first in an Illinois high school, and later in the Pacific University, Miami University and Carleton College. He has lectured on English literature at Northwestern, Minnesota and Ohio State Universities and the University of California.

He has been dean of the college of liberal arts and professor of English at American University since 1925. He is author and editor of a number of English textbooks.

Mr. Murphy Press Leader.

Mr. Murphy has taught in Massachusetts high schools and at Hunter College, New York. From 1924 to 1931, while taking graduate history studies at Columbia University, he served as a member of that institution's administration staff. Mr. Murphy has done extensive work with high school students in connection with their school publications. In southeastern Massachusetts he established three school publications in as many schools and organized a league of school papers.

At Columbia he established what eventually became the Columbia Scholastic Press Association, of which he is now the director and editor of its official journal, the School Press Review. Mr. Murphy conducts annually at Columbia a national congress attended by hundreds of editors, staff members and faculty advisers of high school publications from all parts of the United States.

Mr. Deffenbaugh is one of this country's leading authorities on educational matters, having conducted numerous special school surveys and studies of school administration problems. A graduate of West Virginia and George Washington Universities, he later did graduate work at West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Pittsburgh Universities. Before coming to Washington he served as a country school teacher, grammar and high school principal and city school superintendent in Pennsylvania. He is author of numerous bulletins on educational topics, contributor to educational journals and a lecturer before institutions and summer schools.

Culbertson on Bridge

How to Bid Slams.

It is one of the distinguishing traits of a few who call themselves experts at the Bridge table that when they pick up a hand of well above average strength they shiver with fear that their poor partner (far less wise than they) will not know what to do with the cards he holds and that therefore it is up to the Opening bidder to take full charge of the bidding. Actually, Forcing Opening bids should be made only in such cases where the hand is so rich in honor-tricks that partner can not be expected to hold sufficient strength to make a free response, for a forced response, after all, tells very little that can be of conclusive value except negatively.

Take as an example the hand below, which was submitted to me by a correspondent with a request for its correct bidding.

West, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

	♠ K Q J 9 ♡ A K Q 5 ◇ A 9 ♣ K 10 7
♠ A 10 7 6 5 ♡ 7 6 4 ◇ K Q 6 ♣ A 2	N W E S
	♠ 8 4 3 2 ♡ 10 9 8 3 2 ◇ 8 5 ♣ 8 6

My correspondent states that he opened the bidding with two notrump, to which his partner responded with three spades, which he raised to four, and that the partnership stopped at a Small Slam in spades when a Grand Slam was made laid down.

"How should we have bid the hands?" he inquires.

In Bridge as in life the simplest course is usually best. While West holds a hand of very unusual strength (more than five-plus honor-tricks) the distribution is not quite good enough for an Opening Forcing bid of two, for if partner's hand is a blank, game can not be made. There remain, then, the alternatives of two notrump and one spade. Either of these bids can be made. Because of two factors I prefer the approach bid of one spade. One is that I prefer to approach rather than drive, and the other is that I do not know what I should do if my partner responded to two notrump with a bid of three notrump. Should I then bid four hearts and shut out a possible game in notrump or spades?

Taking all the factors into consideration then, I think my correspondent and his partner might well have solved their bidding problem as follows: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

West	East
1♠	4♠(1)
4NT(2)	5NT(3)
6♡ or 7♠(4)	7♠
Pass

1—With 3 honor-tricks and five trumps, the Raise to game is justified.

2—West need not now show his second suit. He might have held but 2½ to 3 honor-tricks; instead, he has more than five. Five spades must be safe and a Slam is quite probable. By Plastic Valuation West can place not less than four spades and probably five in his partner's hand, together with honors in both diamonds and clubs.

3—Showing West the spade Ace and the club Ace.

4—I think West should bid seven spades, but six hearts no doubt will elicit a further bid from East and the Grand Slam should not be missed.

As a matter of fact, with this particular hand a Grand Slam should be reached if the Opening bid is two notrump. Opposite an Opening two-notrump bid, the Responding Hand is so strong that it should see that the bidding continues until a Grand Slam is reached.

Tomorrow's Hand.

Returning to his North Pearl street station, he noticed the motorman stop a street car, alight and pick up an object from the street.

Today it occured to Walters that perhaps the motorman had picked up his lost bank roll. He called the traction company and learned that Motorman George P. Backman had turned in the missing $163.

Walters said he would reward Backman.

Norfolk, Va., March 27 (Spl.).—Chief of Police Col. W. S. Ironmonger and Councilman S. L. Slover today resigned their positions.

Dr. J. W. Reed, of Ocean View, was elected to succeed Mr. Slover, and it is probable that the duties of chief of police will fall on Col. C. B. Borland, director of public safety. The chief of police was directly under the director of public safety, and it is not believed the post will be filled. Col. Borland was chief of police before he was made head of the public safety bureau.

Chief Ironmonger gave as his reason for relinquishing the office the fact that he had accepted the office of public relations officer in Virginia for the National Distillers.

Mr. Slover was appointed to the council last March, succeeding Mayor P. H. Mason. He served as mayor until a short time ago, when he resigned that office, but continued as a member of the council. When first appointed to that body he stated he would not be a candidate for reelection.
